The New Attack.

The new attack of General Plumer's Second Army in Flanders, in co-operation with Franco-Belgian forces on its left, is a development of the situation which might naturally have been anticipated. Doubtless, it was foreseen by the enemy; but they have reached the unhappy position of being able, in many cases, to foresee developments in Marshal Foch's plan without being able to avert them. General Plumer's new attack was not unexpected for this reason: The enemy are endeavouring to, hold on the wings and draw in their centre, and more particularly at the moment to hold on their right wing and pivot their wheel back upon it. Pressure on their right wing, therefore, is the most embarrassing manœuvre which can confront them; and Marshal Foch promptly applies it. With every new manœuvre of the Allied Armies the enemy's embarrassments accumulate. Their situation goes steadily from bad to worse. They disentangle themselves from one predicament only to find themselves involved in another more complicated in character. This new blow falls on their right wing at the moment when they are attempting to use that wing as the pivot of their retreat. They are not pivoting by the right from choice, but under compulsion. Given the necessity of retreat, and of retreat which must in time come back against the great obstacle of the Ardennes, their most expedient course would have been to pivot by the left, holding fast on the front of Champagne and the Argonne, and withdrawing their right wing into Belgium. The British break-through to Le Cateau, coupled with the heavy French pressure in Champagne, has compelled them to adopt the very awkward and perilous manœuvre of wheeling in the opposite direction.

On the front of their retreating centre and left centre the enemy have fallen back upon the southern part of what is known as the Hunding Line. This was constructed in rear of the Hindenburg Line in the days when General Ludendorff contemplated a retirement in successive stages very different from the hurried retreat to which he has now been forced. The Hunding Line runs from the Oise in rear of St. Quentin along its eastern tributary, the Serre, and so by Sissonne to the bend of the Aisne, thence continuing past the northern end of the Argonne Forest to the Meuse. At its eastern end, where it is also known as the Kriemhilde Line, the Americans have already for some little time been in contact with it. From the Argonne to the Oise the French, rapidly following up the extensive retirement of the past few days, are now everywhere coming into contact with it. The Hunding Line is not a defensive system in any way comparable in strength with the Hindenburg Line, and the enemy are not likely to contemplate a lengthy tenure of it. Its extension north of the Oise has, in fact, been turned by the British advance to Le Cateau. This advance has at once compelled the enemy to retreat southwards and to halt for the moment in the shelter of what remains of the Hunding Line in order to rectify their front north of Le Cateau. The British advance to that point threatened both halves of their line; and in the withdrawal of a modern army, with its masses of men and material, everything depends on the maintenance of order and method. The beginning of confusion is the beginning of disaster. The enemy have retreated in good order to the Hunding Line in the south. They must now try to maintain themselves precariously on that line while they repeat the process of withdrawal on the northern part of their front, similarly threatened by the advance to Le Cateau.

It is at this moment that the new Allied blow has been struck in Flanders. The enemy, as Sir Douglas Haig reports in his despatch of yesterday afternoon, were already reacting strongly north-west of Le Cateau. They were doing so for the very obvious reason that a British advance in this direction towards Valenciennes threatened to sever the southern communications of their forces in the Lille-Douai salient. Yesterday's attack in Flanders similarly threatens the northern communication of their forces in that salient. It has carried Roulers, and makes inevitable the early abandonment by the enemy of the Flanders coast. Its main result, however, is that by approaching Courtrai, north-east of Lille, from the north, it narrows very greatly the passage which still remains open for the withdrawal of the German forces in the Lille-Douai salient. The enemy must certainly have been contemplating the evacuation of this salient, and it would, perhaps, be too much to hope that their forces can be cut off before they make good their escape. There is all the difference, however, between a retirement at leisure and a forced and hurried withdrawal. To such a withdrawal, not only from the Lille-Douai salient, but everywhere, the enemy are being compelled. It means, with a vigilant and superior enemy pressing in pursuit, hard fighting all the way if disaster is to be averted, and consequently a rapid exhaustion of strength. The retreat on concentric lines must mean also terrific congestion of communications, and with every stage of their retreat the German Armies' difficulties of maintaining their communications multiply. The enemy, moreover, while they endeavour painfully to extricate themselves from their entanglement in France and Belgium, are no less painfully aware that this entanglement is giving Marshal Foch a fresh opportunity of attack over the Lorraine frontier into the heart of Germany.

Ireland and the Red Cross.

A note of warning is sounded in the King's letter to the Red Cross, which we print to-day, and in most of the speeches at yesterday's Red Cross meeting in Dublin. Some people may be disposed to think that, when all the campaigns are ended, the war work of the Red Cross will be ended, too. If that impression should become general, and should deprive the Red Cross of financial support, the result would be nothing less than disastrous. We cannot be sure that the war will not continue for many months; but, even if it should end to-morrow, the ministrations of the Red Cross will be needed urgently for a long period after peace has been signed. Our hospitals will be full of stricken men, recovering slowly from crippling wounds, from shell-shock, and from all the other horrors of war. If we are to pay our debt to these men—if they are to be restored to the world as healthy and useful citizens—the wonderful machinery of the Red Cross must be maintained in all the smooth perfection which it has reached to-day. To stop the Red Cross before all the wounds of war have been healed would be an act as short-sighted and illogical as the stopping of the war itself before Germany has been beaten to her knees. At this time of day the Red Cross work needs no advertisement from anybody. During the last four years it has achieved miracles of efficiency and industry: it has established itself as the greatest and most far-reaching agent for the relief of suffering in the whole history of civilisation. Its expenditure, like its work, is enormous. The Earl of Donoughmore announced yesterday that it had spent more than £10,000,000 since the outbreak of the war. The cost of administration is virtually nil: it amounts to fourpence in the pound, and is met by the interest on the Joint War Committee's collected funds. No business man need hesitate to support a concern so thoroughly sound; no patriotic man can fail to support a work whose splendid purpose is the tender care of our splendid fighting men. The expenditure last year was at the rate of about £50,000 a week—and the three Southern Provinces of Ireland paid for more than a week of it. Now that it has risen to about £100,000 a week, they are again asked to foot a week's bill, and we believe that they will not fail. Sir Charles Russell reminded yesterday's meeting that Irishwomen helped to found the Red Cross during the Crimean War. Last year the country, North and South, lived up to that high tradition, and this year it will be not less mindful of the call of the past and the duty of the present. £100,000 is a big sum; but the Joint War Committee for Leinster, Munster, and Connaught, makes its appeal to a generous country, has the support of all the Churches, and has devised a most excellent plan of campaign. It will tap old and new sources this year, and will be helped in every county by a large body of clever and enthusiastic organisers. The Chambers of Commerce will help; the man-in-the-street will help; the farmers, who responded generously last year, will now be asked to redouble their efforts to help those to whom all their prosperity is due. The scheme which Sir John Lumsden outlined yesterday offers opportunities of service in this holy cause to every man, woman, and child in Ireland. As King Manoel said, the tragedy of the Leinster has brought the war to our own doors. The Red Cross collections should be regarded as a national thank-offering for the freedom from death, devastation, and suffering which, through the untiring devotion of our sailors and soldiers, we have enjoyed during the last four years. The campaign will be opened next week with the "Our Day" Flag Day in Dublin, and we hope that all our readers will combine to make it a success from the word "Go." The smallest subscription to the Irish Times Red Cross Fund will be acknowledged in these columns. Our space is precious just now, but we shall give it gladly to a precious cause.

The Price of Meat.

The recent increase of twopence per pound in the price of meat in Great Britain has caused much dissatisfaction. It is generally felt that the advance is not justified by the price paid for cattle to British farmers. That contention is correct, but it has very little bearing on the matter. The supplies of home-produced meat are not sufficient for the requirements of the people, and the greater part of the balance is imported from America. Consequently the price of cattle in the United States and shipping rates are the factors which determine the price of meat in England and Scotland. It has been urged upon the Food Controller that, if he were to increase the purchases in Australia and the Argentine, where cattle are much cheaper than in the United States, he would be able to make a considerable reduction in the price of meat to the consumer. Mr. Clynes, however, has resolutely refused to adopt such a course. His objection is based on the fact that it would involve heavy demands upon shipping—demands which could be met only by the diversion of vessels from the transport of American troops and munitions. The high price of meat in Great Britain, therefore, is inevitable. It is doubtful whether there is equal justification for the present, price in Ireland, where in many respects the conditions are quite different. The public will learn with great satisfaction that the Allies' Food Controllers have taken steps that will avert the danger of the overseas meat markets being controlled by "trusts" after the war. Major Astor, Parliamentary Secretary to the Ministry of Food, stated at Plymouth on Friday that the Allied Food Council "will be in a position to dictate terms to any food trust, and they will be able to prohibit the export of foodstuffs by any such group if there is any attempt at exploitation."

A "LEINSTER" RELIEF FUND.

TO-MORROW'S MANSION HOUSE MEETING.

At the instance of the Lord Mayor of Dublin a meeting to inaugurate a fund for the relief of sufferers from the loss of the "Leinster" will be held in the Mansion House to-morrow, at 3.30 p.m. It is hoped that the citizens will accept this invitation, and that the response will be worthy of Dublin and of Ireland.

The subjoined subscriptions (in addition to those which were acknowledged yesterday) have been sent to the Editor of the Irish Times. We thank the generous donors, and shall be happy to forward their subscriptions to the Lord Mayor of Dublin when his fund has been inaugurated. We suggest that, in the meanwhile, intending subscribers should retain their gifts, and, after the opening of the National Fund, should send them directly to the Lord Mayor.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE IRISH TIMES.

SIR,—I enclose herewith £1 5s. 6d. for the fund which has been opened for those people who have suffered by the cruel deed which sent the Leinster to the bottom of the sea. It represents the contents of my money-box, and I wish it were more. But, perhaps, if other children throughout the country are asked to do the same, a good deal more might be got as the contribution of the children of Ireland, and as their way of showing their sympathy and sorrow. I trust you will approve of this suggestion, and to ask for your kind help to carry it out.—Yours, etc.,

THE "LEINSTER."

["Although the Germans have attempted to change their constitution, they have not changed their hearts. Brutes they were when they commenced the war, and brutes they remain."—Extract from speech by the Right Hon. A. J. Balfour, October 11th, 1918.]

Brutes they began the war, and brutes remain.
In blacker hearts was never spawned the seed
Of crime malignant, callous butcher-deed.
Nothing can wash the ineffaceable stain.
And long as English letters shall spell plain
"Leinster" and "Lusitania," these shall plead
With Christ against the Teuton's pagan creed,
And claim swift justice for our innocent slain.

We wait no Judgment morning for the sea
From charnel depths to give us back our dead.
To-day they rise, and cry against the Huns;
And coward shall his name for ever be
Who till our last retributive bolt is sped
Shall stop the avenging thunder of our guns.

COURT CIRCULAR.

VICEREGAL LODGE, DUBLIN.

MONDAY.

The Archbishop of Dublin, Mrs. Bernard, and Miss Bernard had the honour of being invited to dine with His Excellency the Lord Lieutenant last night (Sunday, October 13th) at the Viceregal Lodge.

The Provost of Trinity College, Mr. Justice and Mrs. Kenny, the High Sheriff of Dublin and Mrs. Beattie, and Mrs. Van Cutsem had the honour of being invited to dine with His Excellency the Lord Lieutenant this evening at the Viceregal Lodge.

His Excellency the Lord Lieutenant, attended by Lieutenant-Colonel the Hon. John Dawnay, Military Secretary, visited the survivors of the R.M.S. Leinster at St. Michael's Hospital, Kingstown, this afternoon.

PREMIER RECEIVED BY THE KING.

The King came specially from Sandringham yesterday morning to Buckingham Palace, and received in audience Mr. Lloyd George, Sir H. H. Wilson, Chief of the Imperial General Staff, and other Ministers. The Prime Minister remained to luncheon with His Majesty.

CHANCERY APPOINTMENTS.

The following appointments have been made by the Lord Chancellor:—Assistant Supervision of the High Court of Justice in Ireland:—Mr. Henry A. Richey, Barrister-at-Law, Assistant Registrar, to be Chancery Registrar, in the place of Mr. Richard W. W. Littledale, K.C., LL.D., deceased; Mr. Thomas C. Stanley Torney, Senior First Class Clerk in the Chancery Registrar's Office, late Acting Assistant Registrar, to be Assistant Registrar, in the place of Mr. H. A. Richey, promoted.

THE MILITARY CROSS.

Second Lieutenant Mervyn Warren, R.G.A., who has been awarded the Military Cross, is a son of Mr. Edward A. Warren, who formerly resided at Drummin House, Dulcek, Co. Meath, and a grandson of Mr. Justice Warren. On attaining military age, Lieutenant Warren came from the Argentine and received his commission. He was awarded the Military Cross under the following circumstances:—"This officer was acting as liaison officer with the artillery, but in addition to this duty he took a prominent part in guiding and assisting the troops he was with throughout nine hours of shell fire, sharing their risks, and inspiring them by his courage and coolness. At the end of the day, when the enemy was approaching, he went out with a gunner to disable the guns, which were in front of a strong point, accomplishing this under heavy fire."

Second Lieutenant Arthur Cecil Brooks, R.F.A., Special Reserve, who has been awarded the Military Cross, is a son of Mr. Arthur J. Brooks, "Cintra," Garville road, Rathgar, Dublin. Second Lieutenant Brooks was educated at St. Andrew's College, Dublin. He was awarded the Military Cross for conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. This officer was left in charge of the last gun to be withdrawn from a position which was being heavily shelled by the enemy, who were within six hundred yards. With eight men he was limbering up when a shell burst, killing seven and wounding the eighth. With great coolness he completed the destruction of the gun with a pick, and then carried the wounded man to safety.[1]

LONDON CORRESPONDENCE.

59 FLEET STREET, LONDON,
MONDAY NIGHT.

Marshals Foch and Haig are allowing the enemy no respite, and the news from Flanders to-day will indicate the fact to the German people. Roulers has been taken, and Courtrai is threatened from the north, while the advance steadily continues. The rapid advance brings Menin, Tourcoing, and Roubaix all in the danger zone for the Germans, for if these go they will have little prospect of being able to hold the Flanders coast or Lille, already threatened by the British recovery of La Bassée.

Perhaps, the most significant piece of war news, and one which throws the strongest doubt upon the genuineness of the German offer of evacuation, is the heavy counter-attacks delivered at Le Cateau. If the German Government was really honest in its offer, it would not be resisting at this point. But, if its only object was to secure the safe withdrawal of its armies to, a shorter line, then its anxiety to delay Haig's Army at this point is perfectly intelligible, for it is precisely here that a British advance would most dangerously threaten the line of retreat. Ludendorff's object is to hold on to his wings in Flanders and Champagne as long as possible so as to give his centre time to retreat without being "pocketed."

In the first flash of excitement caused by the German reply to Mr. Wilson, interest was naturally concentrated on the purely military situation and the conditions under which an armistice might be permitted. But there has now been time to consider the matter in its wider bearings, and the naval position is receiving its due share of attention. With singular and tactless candour the Cologne Volkszeitung, the organ of the Catholic party in Germany, has declared that evacuation would not matter, because Germany would still retain, inter alia, her "intact fleet." Well, that is just what neither British nor Americans are going to allow her to do.

Marshal Foch, it seems to be generally agreed, will be the authority to define the terms of an armistice if the German efforts to obtain one should succeed. These terms will, it is understood, be of such a nature that it would be impossible for the Germans to renew hostilities. The surrender of the whole of the U-boat fleet would be demanded, this being Germany's sole remaining weapon, while the Germans would be required to consent to an immediate exchange of prisoners. This would be a feature of the armistice that would appeal to our people, for anxiety concerning British prisoners of war is very keen at present.

The House of Commons reassembles to-morrow in very different circumstances from those on which it broke up on August 8th. That was the very day on which Sir Douglas Haig began the new offensive, which, in conjunction with the French and American operations, has put such an entirely fresh face upon the military situation. The legislative programme for the remainder of the Session is not of much importance. The principal Bills already tabled are the Scottish Education Bill and the Emigration Bill. Other measures foreshadowed are a State Housing Bill and a Luxury Tax Bill, but, in view of the peace prospects, it is probable that these will be postponed until a new session, or, perhaps, a new Parliament.

For the moment, however, the prospect of an immediate General Election has receded. The Prime Minister and the other members of the War Cabinet are likely to be too busy with the expected negotiations to have time to spare for settling the preliminaries of an appeal to the electors. It is now probable that the election will not be held before February.

Mr. Dillon has given notice that he will ask the Chief Secretary whether immediate and searching inquiry will be made into the circumstances of the sinking of the Leinster, and whether the terms of reference will be so drawn as to permit full investigation of communications which passed last year between the City of Dublin Steamship Company and the Admiralty as to protection of mail packets.

If Germany could only manage to secure peace in the present time she would be better equipped for capturing trade than any other country, since she now excels in plant and machinery any other country in the world. All the machinery used in industrial production in Alsace-Lorraine, and in Poland has been taken to Germany and set up

FROM "THE TIMES" OF TO-DAY.

(BY SPECIAL ARRANGEMENT WITH THE PROPRIETORS OF THE TIMES.)

THE WAR AND THE PEACE.

There was a healthy reaction yesterday, says The Times, after the light-heartedness produced in some quarters by Saturday's news. Cold water is never so refreshing as after these hot days, and with singular unanimity everyone yesterday agreed to take the tonic. What so many people felt—and in these matters instinct and mother-wit are often surer guides than elaborate calculation—is that, in proposing negotiations and an armistice, Germany was preparing to make a bargain of some sort. And that feeling is justified by the latest comments in the German Press. Indeed, the Norddeutsche Allgemeine Zeitung, most authoritative of all, expressly speaks of "sacrifices and fresh ... from both sides" at the Conference table. But what we are all resolved is that there shall be no bargain of any sort. It is not necessary to particularise the advantage that Germany expects to draw from this process of bargaining. If it be the salvation of her Army by an armistice that will give her an unmolested retreat, there is no reason why we should give to Prince Max what we refuse to Ludendorff. If it be the saving of the prestige of Germany's rulers, or even the maintenance of the dynasty, the proposals still leave ... of the dynasty. And if the idea be to unite the German people for a so-called war of defence, after the negotiations have broken down, then the peace proposals only reveal the old wolf under the lamb's fleece. Some people have actually been discussing the proposed armistice, as though both armies had the same to gain from it, and they have been asking what guarantees, what compensation for the ... through an armistice, of a brilliant military position should be exacted. The true answer is that no verbal guarantees are worth anything at all. The only guarantees that are worth considering are hard facts, and the only facts that correspond in the least to popular feeling are those best summed in the phrase of unconditional surrender. The phrase itself means nothing, and it may be dressed up as we please. But the reality matters everything, and for it we are prepared to continue the struggle indefinitely, if it were necessary. It is not enough for Germany to cut her losses. She must quit the world in positive possession of its gains and of its hopes for the future, before we can consent to any relaxation of our military effort. Security can only be won by taking away from her, not merely the desire, but the power to renew the war.

OFFICIAL CONFERENCES.

The situation, says The Times, created by the German reply to President Wilson was the chief subject of conversation in official quarters yesterday. The Cabinet held long sittings, and considered the outlook in all its aspects. The results of the conferences which took place in the last week, between the Allied Prime Ministers and their military and political advisers, were examined. At those conferences the main conditions of the granting of any armistice to the enemy are understood to have been agreed upon, the duration of an eventual armistice discussed, and the method of procedure fixed. But it is not by any means thought certain, or even probable, that the question of an armistice will take practical shape in the immediate future. It is certain, however, that, should a position arise in which the granting of an armistice becomes expedient, Marshal Foch and the British naval authorities are likely to have a decisive voice in settling its terms.

PUBLIC OPINION ON THE GERMAN MOVE.

There is no room, says The Times, for misunderstanding the popular attitude towards the latest German Note. Members returning to London from the north (where some of the newspaper headlines on Sunday were even more misleading than those which predominated, with rare and honourable exceptions, in London) report that the rejoicing there was wholly due to the impression that Germany had made a complete and unconditional surrender. A ... of the Note very soon re... ... to all who could understand it. In every part of the country the uppermost feeling was one of absolute determination that there shall be no loophole for evasion whatever. The "guarantees" must be hard facts, not pledges and promises.

LAON DELIVERED.

The first thing to say about the town of Laon, telegraphs the Special Correspondent of The Times, is that, unlike Noyon and so many others it is practically undamaged. The chief care of the Germans during their occupation appears to have been looting, or what they called "requisitioning," all the usual articles that seem to excite their cupidity, principally women's clothes, and every description of metal-work, for instance, as the Cathedral bells and all or most of the pipes of the organ. But the beautiful Cathedral itself they have left uninjured. They used it at one time as a stable for their horses, until a strong a protest was raised that they were turned out of doing it, and since then Protestant and Catholic Services, German and French, have been held alternately at regular intervals. This evening, just before I came away a solemn Te Deum for the deliverance of the town was sung, at which, for the first time for four years, only French (and one Englishman) were present. It was an extraordinarily moving Service, and I shall never forget the sight of that large congregation thronging the building in the evening gloom, lit up by the twinkling lights of the altar, while the organ, which, somehow, managed to make music, in spite of the absence of many of its pipes, crashed out the great chords of thanksgiving.

"BRUTES THEY REMAIN."

The Times, in commenting on the report of Mr. Justice Younger's Committee on the treatment of British prisoners, says:—Even the ... of our people will hardly read it without ... detestation of an enemy who ... of such cruelty. But no squeamishness can excuse failure to read ... the treatment by the Germans now ... who fell into their hands in March, ... what prisoners are as yet the lucky ... have only had to endure for a few ... report does not stand alone. It ... the coping stone of an ... weight of evidence against the German ... day may see it superseded by some ... dreadful count in the indictment of humanity against them. "Brutes they were when they began the war," as Mr. Balfour said ... "brutes they remain."

THE DUBLIN MILK SUPPLY.

The first meeting of the Committee of Inquiry into the Dublin Milk Supply was held at Kildare Street House, Dublin, yesterday. The members were welcomed by Lord Granard, who thanked them for their ready response to his invitation, and expressed the hope that they would succeed in placing the city's milk supply upon a satisfactory basis. The Lord Mayor then took the chair, and the Committee proceeded to map out the lines upon which the investigations are to be directed.

AWARDS OF MERITORIOUS SERVICE MEDAL.

The King has conferred the Meritorious Service Medal upon the following, with others, in recognition of valuable services rendered with the Forces in Mesopotamia:—8740 Coy. S. M. ... Conn. Rgrs. (Dublin); 9664 Coy. Q.M.-S. J. P. Crean, Conn. Rgrs. (Bristol); 47613 Sgt. T. Moroney, R.F.A. (Birr).

MR. KELLAWAY, M.P., AND THE WAY TO PEACE.

Mr. Kellaway, M.P., Parliamentary Secretary to the Ministry of Munitions, interviewed yesterday, said that the way to make an early peace was to go on fighting and working as if the war ... Peace must come, not by force of words, but by force of arms. There must be no slackening until the Central Powers had been beaten beyond hope of recovery.

KNITTED ARTICLES FOR THE TROOPS.

The Director-General of Voluntary Organisations has issued an appeal for knitted articles for the use of the troops during the coming winter. The articles, which are wanted now for early despatch overseas, should be forwarded to the Depot, or to the Comforts Dépot, 45 Horseferry road, London, S.W. 1.

ALLIES AND THE GERMAN OFFER.

FORECAST OF REPLY.

TURKEY AND SEPARATE PEACE.

STRONG VIEWS OF THE AMERICAN PRESS.

The Press Association is in a position to affirm definitely that, while there been (in accordance with expectation) no marked development of the peace situation, there have been exchanges of views between the Allies which indicate the probability of an unfavourable reply to the German peace move.

The Prime Minister came back yesterday morning from the country, where he and some of his Ministerial colleagues were in conference on Sunday, and was kept busy all day. In the morning Mr. Balfour and other Ministers, with naval and military chiefs, saw him in conference. In the afternoon he had an audience of the King, and lunched with him, and, after receiving the American editors at 10 Downing street, he had practically no respite from the pressure of affairs of State.

Lord Reading was closely associated with the Premier throughout the day (after spending the week-end with him), for it may be taken that his lordship knows more about the mind of America at this moment than anybody who is not actually American. Mr. Churchill, M. Take Jonescu (ex-Rumanian Minister), and Lord Northcliffe were among Mr. Lloyd George's visitors in the evening.

Mr. Balfour, who, with Mr. Bonar Law, is keeping in the closest touch with his chief, is also being seen frequently by the representatives of the foreign Powers. Yesterday afternoon the French, Spanish, and Italian Ambassadors, M. Venezelos, the Greek Minister, and other diplomatists visited the Foreign Office, and, as will be remembered, the Serbian Premier is now in London.

TURKEY AND SEPARATE PEACE.

A Vienna telegram to Sunday's Weser Zeitung says the first step of the new Turkish Cabinet under Tewfik Pasha was the despatch of a Note to the Austro-Hungarian Government to the effect that owing to the military situation Turkey would be obliged to conclude a separate peace with the Entente. The Central Powers requested Turkey to await the result of the exchange of Notes with President Wilson. No reply to this has up to the present been received from Turkey.

PRESIDENT WILSON RECEIVES TEXT.

The German Note, which is identical with the wireless text, was presented to the State Department (says a Reuter's Washington telegram) by the Swiss Chargé d'Affaires before noon yesterday. Meanwhile, President Wilson called Mr. Lansing and Mr. Baker to the White House for a conference. Later Colonel House and Mr. Daniels joined the conference, which lasted for nearly two hours.

AMERICAN PRESS AND THE NOTE.

The New York Tribune says:—We wish the President had said to Prince Max, "The peace conditions you refer to are for discussion between the American Government and its Allies. They will represent our agreement on the state of the world. Henceforth, it is not for you either to decline or to accept those conditions. We will impose them upon you: The only thing we will accept from you is unconditional surrender." Germany does not offer surrender. Why should she? We have not demanded it.

The Sun refers to President Wilson's previous declarations thus—The Allies and Germany have no common thought or language. The question which now leaps into insistent prominence is this—What radical change has taken place in the German Government, and what are the credentials for the voice now speaking? A satisfactory credential would be the announcement of the Kaiser's abdication and the renunciation of succession by those who followed in the line of his discredited dynasty.

The Tribune further asks if the criminal Hohenzollerns and the criminal junkers have been superseded by this meeting with President Wilson's vital condition, or if the representations and alleged, but uncertified concurrence, of the majority of the Reichstag is no more than a form of camouflage for that autocracy of militarism with which Foch, Haig, and Pershing are dealing in the field. The Note, it concludes, does not supply this. Unless President Wilson has information through other channels we can readily imagine what his answer will be.

STATEMENT BY MR. HUGHES.

Mr. Hughes, interviewed by a representative of the Matin (says Reuter's Paris Correspondent), was asked what would be the result of the German reply to President Wilson, and he replied—"All I can say is that the voice of France will soon be heard, and I have not the least doubt what her answer will be."

Speaking of the Australian troops, Mr. Hughes said that the one desire is to march to the end to ensure a complete and glorious deliverance of all French soil.

The Petit Parisien writes:—It is possible that President Wilson will consult the Allies, who will only support him in his attitude when the Entente holds victory, which confers the power of punishing the guilty parties. This is not a moment for pity. The capitulation of Germany must be complete, and she must pay for her crimes without further cavil.

THE KAISER'S INTENTIONS.

The Wolff Agency declares, says a Reuter's Bern telegram, that the rumours to the effect that the Kaiser intends to abdicate are entirely without foundation.

A Berlin telegram announces that the Kaiser has instructed the Chancellor and Prussian Minister of Justice to propose to him, with a view of granting an extensive amnesty, the names of those persons sentenced by the Imperial Tribunal of Prussian Civil Tribunal, including extraordinary courtsmartial, for political crimes and misdemeanours, and especially for punishable acts on the occasion of strikes, street demonstrations, food disturbances, and other such occurrences. Similar instructions have been issued by the German Federal Princes and Senates of free towns.

"A POPULAR GOVERNMENT."

A Berlin telegram states that Dr. Friedberg, Vice-President of the Prussian Ministerial Council, in an interview with Herr Hollberg, of the Norddeutsche Allgemeine Zeitung, said:—"You ask why we applied to President Wilson. The answer is obvious. First, President Wilson set forth positive peace aims, while all our other enemies merely outlined rhetorical generalities. Secondly, the new German Government found itself in agreement in the most important points with President Wilson, inasmuch as it aims at a peace of justice, and repudiates every sort of peace of violence. The present Government knows it has the support of the great majority of the German people. Therefore, its reply to President Wilson's questions confirms that fact, and accepts President Wilson's principles. We have a Government now which guarantees the influence of the nation on the conduct of its destinies, and wants to be a popular Government in every respect.

NO ABANDONMENT OF GERMAN SOIL.

A Berlin telegram gives the following declaration issued by the Conservative Party in the Reichstag in connection with the negotiations regarding the reply to President Wilson's Note:—"Our armies are still far over the enemy frontiers. Evacuation of occupied territory before an honourable peace and before the integrity of the Empire's territory are assured may be fatal. No abandonment of German soil is to be reconciled with German honour. Wide patriotic circles await, together with ourselves, a declaration from the Government that it will unswervingly adhere to this point of view. The German people is resolved to defend the sacred soil of the Fatherland to the last."

GERMAN PRESS AND "UNCONDITIONAL SURRENDER."

The German Press is now endeavouring to make the public forget all that has been said formerly about the impregnability of the Siegfried or Hindenburg positions. The Berlin Correspondent of the Koelnische Volkszeitung, for instance, says:—The retreat is still going on, and perhaps it will go still further back during the coming days and weeks. But, adds the journal, the German people cannot be forced into unconditional surrender.

PRINCE MAX'S POSITION.

A Berlin telegram says the National Zeitung learns that at Saturday's meeting of the Inter-Party Committee the central point of discussion was the letter which a leading personage, presumably Prince Max, wrote last summer to Switzerland, and which recently fell into the hands of the British Government, as proved by its publication in the Entente Press. The Inter-Party Committee appears to have recognised that the letter may lead to consequences which may, perhaps, render doubtful this statesman's tenure of office. At six o'clock on Saturday the Inter-Party Committee met again to deliberate on the same matter.

AUSTRIAN AND HUNGARIAN PREMIERS RESIGN.

A Vienna telegram to the Vossische Zeitung says it is now confirmed that Dr. Wekerle, Hungarian Premier, has tendered his resignation, which the Emperor has accepted.

Baron von Hussarek, Austrian Premier, has, it is reported, also resigned.

THEN AND NOW.

THE BELGIAN CONTRAST.

PROGRESS OF THE NEW ATTACK.

Telegraphing early yesterday, the Press Association's Special Correspondent with the British Army in France says:—

At dawn this morning the battle anticipated in Belgium was opened by the Second British Army, with strong Allied forces operating between them and the Yser floods. The front of our own attack extends from the River Lys at Wervicq to St. Pieter, a hamlet upon the Roulers-Menin road.

The artillery retalliation to our opening barrage was quite slight, and can be accounted for by the large number of guns which the Germans have lost in this zone.

Our progress, after some resistance, became uniform.

Up to six o'clock we had advanced to an average depth of 3,000 yards, and about 600 prisoners had come back.

In a later message the same correspondent says:—The day had gone well, and the Germans have evacuated a wide long string of Belgian soil, but on very different terms to what they had hoped. The real armistice has been brought definitely nearer. It is, indeed, interesting, as helping us to realise the almost incredible change which has been brought about within the past three months, to recall the situation in Flanders in July last. There can be no harm now in saying that at that time many of us were hourly expecting a heavy onslaught by the Germans on the Second Army front. At that date the enemy's assault divisions were densely packed in the front line, and in close reserve. We understood, too, that all plans had been completed for delivering a tremendous hammer-blow, including the emplacing of hundreds of carefully camouflaged batteries, from which only one gun was allowed to register the range, so as not to reveal the real artillery strength. Presumably the enemy was only waiting to see how his last disastrous offensive in Champagne would develop before striking for the coast. Then came the French counter-stroke, and Prince Rupprecht continued to hesitate, whilst we went digging fresh trench lines, and increasing our fighting measures, so as to make the German effort as costly as possible.

The death knell of the German Flanders enterprise was struck when Sir Henry Rawlinson launched his brilliant battle of August 8th. About the middle of that month one of the enemy divisions suddenly disappeared from opposite the Second Army front. Two days later a second division had gone. From that time on the rate of withdrawal to the sorely pressed Southern fronts continued, at the average rate of a division every other morning, until there came a time when the German line in Flanders had been depleted to the extreme limit of safety. Then it was that the Belgian and British Armies launched out.

Meanwhile, how ceaseless had been the toll of preparation few can imagine. The deep, dreary morass of last year's bitter fighting had to be converted into a zone of decent communications. Sappers and labour battalions toiled as never before. They literally ran forward railway metals—a marvellous change from the posture of affairs three months ago.

RAPID PROGRESS.

With the execution of check at one part of the front, occasioned by heavy machine-gun fire, which took some stiff fighting to subdue, our progress has been satisfactorily rapid. The early afternoon found us five miles from our starting line of the early morning, at the extreme depth of our penetration, and an average of three miles forward on the whole battle front. At this time we had collected nearly twelve hundred prisoners and eleven guns. The Germans were so far surprised in places, notwithstanding that they had been anticipating our attack, and had put down considerable protecting barrage during the small hours, that they had not time fully to man their front line before our front line were upon them.

The Belgians, on our left, are making excellent progress. The latest news I have of their advance, which would not be down to later than two o'clock, is that they have taken Winkel, St. Eloi, Boshmolens, and are less than two kilometres west of Iseghem.

It is reported that some thousands of prisoners have been made, and several batteries taken complete with their teams. Zindhoek, Wignendacle Station, Cortemarck Station, and the village of Handzaeme were reported to be in the hands of the Allies by one o'clock. It is interesting to know that, although the advance is bringing the Allies easily within range of the big coastal batteries, not a gun apparently has been fired from this direction. There is a rumour which, whilst not officially confirmed, is regarded as very probable, that one of our Monitors has steamed right up to the entrance to Ostend harbour and is heavily bombarding the enemy positions. The weather has remained fine and quite clear enough. German prisoners state that only last night divisional orders were sent around promising them an armistice within 48 hours. They were, therefore, not a little disgusted at finding themselves heavily attacked instead. They are cheerfully unanimous that Germany is now hopelessly beaten, but welcome the end of the war on any terms. Their casualties have been very heavy in to-day's fighting, and whilst our field dressing stations are crowded with German wounded, it is very gratifying to state that the number of British cases so far admitted has been very small. Although the enemy is throwing in such reserves as he can collect, there is no news that the resistance is appreciably stiffening. Our artillery is getting forward with a wonderful degree of mobility, and the transport organisation is working admirably.

From the rest of the blazing British front there is nothing of special moment to report. Flanders has suddenly leapt into a strategic prominence of the first importance.

RAPID ALLIED ADVANCE.

GERMANS FIRE AND PILLAGE LAON VALLEY.

Reuter's Expert Commentator, writing on Sunday night, says:—

Every day brings a fresh victory. After St. Quentin, Cambrai, Le Cateau, and Vouziers, it is La Fère and Laon which have been occupied to-day.

Thus the retreating movement imposed on the enemy by our alternate offensives is being amplified and hastened by the irresistible pressure of General Mangin's soldiers. The vast wooded St. Gobain massif is entirely in our hands, as well as the heights of Laon.

With these natural positions, the enemy loses the pivot on which he had supported for four years his resistance on this front.

It is enough to say that the defensive organisations which he had accumulated there were formidable. The advance realised to-day extended to eight kilometres on the greater part of the front of 50 kilometres which separates the Oise from the Aisne Canal. The railway from La Fère to Laon and Rheims is in our hands along its whole extent.

At Laon our troops found 6,500 civilians out of 16,000 which it numbered before the war. In evacuating the town, the buildings of which had hardly suffered, the Germans committed a new crime against the law of nations, carrying into captivity 300 civilians, including the Mayor. At Marchais 2,000 civilians were liberated.

The German authorities evacuated the population of the district, whom they had only advised to leave before October 14, because a bombardment by the German guns would begin the day after. But our troops will not allow the enemy to put this threat into execution, for the advance continues without interruption in the direction of the Serre, which will be the first stage of the retreat north of Laon.

Already all the villages in the valley are burning, which is an evident sign that the Germans are evacuating them after having pillaged them.

PRESIDENT AND PREMIER VISIT FRONTS.

President Poincare, says Reuter's Paris Correspondent, on Saturday visited the regions on both banks of the Meuse recently recovered by the Franco-American troops. The soldiers spoke with joyful pride of their fights with the Austro-Hungarian troops, most of whom surrendered. The President bestowed the Cravate de Commandeur on General Andlauer. He afterwards proceeded to Verdun, which was still under bombardment, and conferred the Croix d'Honneur on Bishop Ginisty. He subsequently visited St. Mihiel and Commercy, where he was warmly welcomed, returning to Paris the following morning.

On Saturday and Sunday M. Clemenceau visited the battle front in Champagne, on the Aisne, and the Somme, in order to assure himself that complete arrangements had been made for the bringing up of food supplies and munitions. He remarked that the troops were cheerfully enduring the fatigues of a war of pursuit, and that their moral was admirable.

On Sunday M. Clemenceau visited St. Quentin and Cambrai, the ruins of which bear witness to the passing of the Vandal. A few inhabitants who remained in Cambrai told him how the civilians had suffered during the German occupation.

A Note which has been issued on this subject says:—"It was with Sir Douglas Haig, the glorious leader of the British Army, that the Premier visited Cambrai, the capture of which crowned the splendid victory of the British Armies."

"Commandant B." writes:—The Lille-Douai bastion, which supports the enemy right, is already heavily breached and the front is threatened north and south by the Belgian and British Armies. If it goes, the line collapses for the greater part, and the evacuation of almost the whole of Belgium follows. The immediate consequence will be that the enemy will be no longer able to boast of defending the Fatherland on foreign soil, and of that day alone we are disposed to talk.

BIG ADVANCE IN FLANDERS.

ROULERS STORMED BY THE FRENCH.

BRITISH SECOND ARMY IN ACTION.

6,000 PRISONERS AND SEVERAL BATTERIES TAKEN.

GERMAN ATTACKS REPULSED NEAR LE CATEAU.

AMERICANS CARRY STRATEGICAL POSITIONS.

While the German arms are reeling under the swift blows of the week-end in the Laon-La Fère region, the Allies have struck home in Flanders. Yesterday the Second British Army, in co-operation with French and Belgian forces, launched a smart attack, upon a twenty-kilometre front. The French carried Roulers by assault, the Belgians entered Iseghem and approached the outskirts of Lendelede, thus threatening Courtrai, and the combined forces took 6,000 prisoners and six batteries complete.

On the British front further south the Germans launched a series of strong attacks north of Le Cateau, which were repulsed with loss.

The French continued their advance in the region between Laon and La Fère, while the American troops north of Verdun, "operating against positions of the greatest strategic value and natural strength," have passed the towns of Cunel and Romagne, and taken 750 prisoners.

BRITISH REPORTS.

Monday, 9.57 a.m.

Yesterday afternoon the enemy opened a heavy bombardment on a wide front north of Le Cateau.

Under cover of this artillery fire, strong infantry attacks were launched against the position held by us east of the Selle River in the neighbourhood of Solesmes.

These attacks were successfully repulsed after stiff fighting.

Further attacks, in which tanks were employed to support the infantry assaults, were delivered by the enemy yesterday, without success, against our positions opposite the village of Haspres.

Our patrols pushed forward yesterday and during the night at a number of points south and north of Douai, and have gained ground and taken prisoners.

7.57 p.m.

On the British front south of the Lys River only local actions are reported.

Our patrols and advanced detachments have been active, enabling progress to be made at certain points, and securing a number of prisoners.

Local fighting has taken place in the neighbourhood of Erquinghem and south of Wez Macquart, as the result of which we captured several prisoners.

Aviation.—On October 13th, in spite of mist and rain, valuable reconnaissances were successfully carried out by our contact machines at a very low height, and the enemy was continually harassed by bombs and machine gun fire. There was no air fighting, but one enemy machine was shot down in our lines by machine gun fire from the ground. One of our machines is missing. At night the weather improved, and twelve tons of bombs were dropped by us on important railway communications. One of our night bombing machines failed to return.

FRENCH DESPATCHES.

Monday.

On the front generally we remain in close contact with the enemy's infantry.

South of Château Porcein we have driven back, on the northern bank of the Canal, the last enemy elements which were still holding out.

Monday Night.

Local operations enabled us to improve our positions on the left bank of the Oise and in the region of Mont d'Origny.

South of the Serre we occupied Monceau-les-Leups, and we reached within one kilometre south of Assis-sur-Serre.

With the co-operation of Italian troops, we carried and passed beyond Sissonne.

Further east, in spite of very lively resistance on the part of the enemy, we advanced a considerable distance on the north bank of the Aisne, and carried our line beyond the villages of La Malmaison, St. Germain, and Mont Lethow.

In the region of Asfeld, we crossed the Aisne at several points north of Blanzy.

Aviation.—Lieutenant Bezon Verduruz shot down, on October 9th, his tenth enemy aeroplane. On the same day, Sergeant-Major Berthelot shot down his tenth and eleventh machines, one balloon and ten aeroplanes.

BELGIAN REPORT.

Monday Night.

Considerable progress has been made on the whole of the twenty-kilometre front.

The French carried Roulers by assault.

The Belgians liberated several villages, carried Iseghem, and reached the outskirts of Lendelede, delivering a numerous civil population.

The advance varies between four and ten kilometres.

The number of prisoners counted so far amounts to nearly 6,000, half of whom were captured by the French and half by the Belgians.

Six complete batteries and other guns not yet counted have been taken.

The enemy started fires at Roulers and other places.

AMERICAN DESPATCH.

Monday.

This morning the American troops resumed their advance north of Verdun.

They are now operating against positions of the greatest strategic value and natural strength.

To-day they passed beyond the towns of Cunel and Romagne.

About 750 prisoners have been reported.

GERMAN REPORTS.

Monday.

Army Group of the Crown Prince Rupprecht.—Thrusts by the enemy against the Canal front on both sides of Douai were repulsed.

The enemy, who penetrated temporarily into Aubigny-au-Bac, was thrown out again by a counter-attack, north-east of Cambrai.

Strong British attacks between Bouchain and Haspres broke down.

South of Solesmes we captured a nest of British which had been left from the recent fighting.

Army Group of the German Crown Prince.—North of the Oise renewed attacks by the French at and south of Aisonville were repulsed.

North of Laon and on the Aisne we are occupying our new positions.

The successful battles of the last few days at the Chemin des Dames and in the positions on the Suippe, before which the enemy suffered heavy losses in vain assaults, which were renewed almost daily, have rendered possible the smooth carrying out of the movements here, as well as in Champagne.

Army Group of General von Gallwitz.—On both sides of the Meuse there have been no big fighting operations.

In successful raids we recaptured small sections of positions which were still occupied and held by the enemy at the conclusion of the fighting on October 12th.

Monday Night.

We have stemmed the thrust.

On the Oise and west of the Oise and in the Aire and west of the Meuse attacks of the French and the Americans failed.

WAR SITUATION.

GERMAN WITHDRAWALS.

THE BRITISH ADVANCE.

Dealing with the military situation early yesterday, the Press Association says.—

The only change to hand this morning is that we are practically along the whole water-line of the Haute Deule and Sensée Canals in the north, but it is hardly likely that we shall get over them for the next few days. In the south the enemy has evacuated Laon, the whole of the St. Gobain massif, and the Chemin des Dames, and the French are approaching the line of the Serre and Souche, behind which is located the Hunding Line. We have not quite got up to that position north-east of Laon, but we shall probably be up to it before the end of the day. In that particular sector we cannot expect the rapid moves that have been experienced recently. The situation is more or less stable, but there is no doubt that the enemy will not be allowed to rest, and that blows will be delivered in other quarters.

So far as it has gone the enemy retirement on the Hunding Line has been carried out in an orderly manner. He has not left behind much material, and is reacting very heavily north of Le Cateau; in fact, at present he is not adopting the tactics of a beaten enemy. At the same time this line runs very awkwardly for him, especially between the Oise and the Scarpe.

All that can be said is that he has got out of an awkward corner very successfully.

THE NEW ATTACK.

CO-OPERATION OF THE FLEET.

BRITISH SECOND ARMY IN ACTION.

EFFECT ON LILLE SALIENT.

Dealing with the military situation, the Press Association last night wrote:—This morning's attack rests between Dixmude and Wervicq. It was made by the Belgians, with French contingents, and the British Second Army, and the line, as reported at about two o'clock, was due east from Dixmude, including Cortemarck, then running south-east of Roulres, which is being cleared up, and to about a mile east of Winkel, St. Floi. From that point it runs to just east of Moorseele, and then about fifteen hundred yards north-west of Menin, and reaches the old line at Wervicq.

The weather was fine.

The French units took 3,000 prisoners, and the enemy's resistance was rather weak to the south of Roulers, but very vigorous in the direction of Thielt, which is practically east-north-east of Roulers.

The fleet were co-operating in the direction of Ostend.

It seemed that the attack has gone very well, indeed, a very early report stating that the advance was of two to three miles on practically the whole front.

The effect both on the occupation of the Belgian coast, now very much in danger, and on the Lille salient, now being rapidly turned from the north, will certainly be very great.

The operations are still proceeding.

LIEUTENANT-COLONEL BLACKBURNE.

Among the passengers aboard the Leinster were Lieutenant-Colonel Charles Harold Blackburne, D.S.O., Dragoon Guards, Headquarters Staff, Irish Command, Mrs. Blackburne, and their two children, Beatrice Audrey, aged 11, and Charles Bertram, aged 7. Mrs. Blackburne is among the survivors, but Colonel Blackburne and the children were lost.

IN THE LIBERATED DISTRICTS.

BRITISH CARE FOR THE INHABITANTS.

A Press Association message from Paris, dated Monday, says:—The correspondent of the Petit Parisien at the British front telegraphs:—One ought to see the evidences of gratitude of the poor inhabitants of the freed villages towards their liberators, and the delicate and eager attention which the "Tommies" bestow on the old men and children. Although hardened by memories of the battlefield, one can scarcely contain one's emotions at the sight. The British have taken in hand the provisioning of the civil population, in spite of their constantly increasing numbers. A single day's advance on Le Cateau freed eleven thousand civilians. All are eating meat and white bread. Those unfortunate people who are too ill or too worn out by their sufferings, or who have lost their homes, are taken back to the rear. The correspondent was present at the evacuation of the inhabitants of Maretz, and was greatly touched at seeing a British officer with his own hands place a ladder against a wagon for the women to climb up. In the little village of Serain, the correspondent questioned a group of inhabitants about their impressions. The conversation lasted some time, each inhabitant relating his sufferings, when, suddenly, the roll of a drum interrupted their tales. A gendarme announced that a meal was ready for the British at the Town Hall, and added, turning to his compatriots, "and for you as well; you understand." Thereupon all the inhabitants shouted and cheered, and their mingled cries of "Vive l'Angleterre, Vive la France," proved that all had, indeed, understood.

GERMANS AND THE SINKING OF THE LEINSTER.

WAR ON WOMEN AND CHILDREN.

The only German comment on the sinking of the Hirano Maru and the Leinster to hand up to the present is an official Berlin telegram, which makes the following attempt to excuse the continuation of ruthless submarine war under Germany's popular Government:—"Much as the death of civilians not directly participating in the war must be regretted, it must be emphasised in contradiction to the enemy Press agitation that distinction between a passenger steamer and transport ship is impossible, just as it is impossible for British airmen to distinguish whether his bombs dropped on Bruges kill German soldiers or Berlin citizens."

The telegram also draws in the bombing of German towns, and says the British airmen can be practically certain he "only" kills and wounds the civilian population.

It has been proved beyond doubt in official naval circles, says the Press Association, that the German submarine which sank the Japanese passenger ship Hirano Maru without warning at the dead of night off the Irish coast deliberately fired a torpedo at the United States destroyer Sterett while that vessel was endeavouring to rescue the innocent men, women, and children who had been thrown into the water when the Japanese ship was torpedoed. The result was that the United States vessel had to leave her work of rescue to hunt the submarine away, and it is estimated that in consequence over one hundred lives were lost.

This charge of Hun brutality is based upon a statement made by an officer who was on board the United States destroyer. The statement is corroborated by seven members of the vessel's crew, all of whom definitely state that at the time they were hauling, or in the act of hauling survivors over the side, they saw the torpedo approaching the vessel.

U-BOAT THREAT.

The Rheinische Westfaelische Zeitung says it has good reason to believe that the submarine war will reach its climax during the winter, and will produce in Entente countries an economic crisis of unanticipated dimensions.

GERMAN PRISON CAMPS.

SHOCKING REVELATIONS.

BRITISH COMPELLED TO WORK UNDER SHELL-FIRE.

The Government Committee on the Treatment by the Enemy of British Prisoners of War, of which Mr. Justice Younger is Chairman, has issued a further report, based upon the statements made by upwards of seventy of our men who were taken prisoner during the German spring offensives on the Western front, and have since succeeded in making good their escape. Except that the treatment meted out to the more recent captures has necessarily not yet been so prolonged, it supplies almost an exact counterpart of what the earlier captives have had to endure. The evidence of their treatment already before the Committee is voluminous. Its outstanding features are the utter disregard by the German Command of its obligations with reference to prisoners, whether entered into before or since; the abuse of the Red Cross flag; the compulsory employment of prisoners, on pain at times of death, in operations concerned with the then German offensive; the setting of their imprisonment and place of work within the range of British guns; consistent semi-starvation; insanitary surroundings; the absence of any facility for keeping themselves clean; the refusal of either clothing or warmth to men enfeebled by want of food and weakened by excessive toil, and the denial of hospital treatment to those prostrated by consequential disease.

Using, as far as possible, the words of the men themselves, the Committee describes the conditions prevailing in some of the more typical camps in support of this indictment. A witness, who was confined in a cage, or camp, at Villers, near Arras, said that their work consisted of road-making building light railways, and carrying ammunition from one dump to another. They had nothing to eat or drink from 4 a.m., when they were given a drink of coffee, but no food, until 7 p.m. They received some soup and one loaf to three men. The work was very hard and continuous. They dared not rest a moment. If they did, sentries would strike them with the butt end of a rifle. During an hour's spell at midday the prisoners, who were very weak and exhausted, used to wander round collecting nettles, which they took to the camp at night to eat.

Another witness who had been confined at Villers, stated that near the camp there was a large ammunition dump, covered with tarpaulin, and with two or three Red Cross flags over it. Our artillery found that out, and blew it up. Some of our shells dropped in the camp, killing four of our men and wounding a fifth.

A similar camp at Ecoust, about nine kilometres from Villers, was constantly under shell-fire from our guns and bombing danger from our aeroplanes. A witness from this place stated that one of our big guns was shelling near the camp on April 13th, and that one shell killed a corporal of the West Yorks and wounded three others of our men. While at Ecoust this witness noticed some marquees, all flying the Red Cross flag. There was a huge red cross marked on the ground for aeroplanes to see. In these marquees were stored all kinds of military stores and ammunition. Appropriate attention has since been given by our airmen to the marquees referred to by the witness.

Fifteen hundred British prisoners were confined in an old church at Salome, which was so crowded that many were unable to sit or lie down on the filthy and verminous straw. Working parties were told off to carry ammunition up to the front line or on to dumps, and a witness mentions that he was told of fourteen members of a British working party being wounded and several killed in one day.

A witness who had been confined in a hut near a village within 600 yards of the German front line, said that they were shelled regularly. One night fourteen British of the 55th Division were killed and eleven wounded from shell fire. They had to work without gas masks, the Germans having taken them away.

At Cantin the British prisoners complained to an officer of having to load ammunition, and were told that if they refused to work the ringleaders would be shot. A similar complaint was made to a German Staff officer who spoke English. His only reply was to line the prisoners up in a squad, and to order that the first man who refused to work would be instantly shot.

At the hospital at Valenciennes a man named Private Ellis, with a bullet wound through his lung, lay for some days unattended to, and was then taken to see a doctor. As he was in great pain he was calling out, and the doctor hit him a hard punch on the jaw, and sent him back to the ward. He returned and died the next day. The witness who narrates this fiendish act of cruelty says that the doctor treated the patients very roughly. He used to pull men about dreadfully. In the first week or two he was there the witness counted an average of fifteen deaths daily, and he is convinced that with proper treatment there would not have been anything like this mortality.

When it was known that some witnesses were going to try to escape from Sailly two others came to them and prayed them "for God's sake, to try and get England to do something to help them to get out of that hell."

Four Cameron Highlanders, taken at Arras on March 28th, were compelled for two hours to serve a German field gun under British fire.

The Committee select two cases for special mention, because they each, though in different ways, illustrate the nature of the men and organism to which our forces are opposed. On March 21st fifteen officers, non-commissioned officers, and men of the 1st Battalion Shropshire Light Infantry were taken prisoners at Lagnicourt. One of these who escaped says: "We were defending a trench, and held out to the last. When we were surrounded and had to surrender, the Germans beckoned to us to come towards them, and as the first three of us privates showed ourselves they were deliberately shot. On the same day five Staffordshires were taken at Bullecourt. A German officer was standing near the trench, and close by him was a private with fixed bayonet. One of the Staffordshires was scrambling out of the trench to surrender when the private ran to bayonet him. The officer ordered the private to halt, but, no attention being paid to the command, the officer shot the private dead with his revolver. The British soldier had not been touched.

NISH RETAKEN.

SPLENDID ALLIED PROGRESS IN SERBIA.

Sunday's French communiqué from Salonika states:—

Serbian troops yesterday morning captured the town of Nish, which the enemy had received orders to defend at all costs. They gained a footing on the hills to the north of the town.

During severe fighting which preceded the capture of the town the Serbians captured four 150mm. guns and two mountain guns.

Further east French cavalry entered Bela Palanka. On the Nish-Pirot road, west of the Morava, Serbian forces have reached Prokoplie, Merosina, and Miramor.

In Upper Serbia French troops have occupied Prizrend and Mitrovitza.

DESTRUCTIVE FOREST FIRES IN AMERICA.

VILLAGES WIPED OUT.

800 PERSONS PERISH.

A New York telegram, dated Sunday, states that a message from Duluth says:—It is estimated there that 500 persons have been burned to death in a forest fire in North Minnesota, extending from Ashland to Mooselake. The loss of property amounts to many million dollars.

It is estimated that eight hundred people perished in the forest fires in Northern Wisconsin and in Minnesota lumber fields. Thirteen thousand people are homeless and without clothing, and whole sections of the country have been devastated. Reports that enemy agents started the fire are unconfirmed, but incendiaries were driven from local shipyards when the fires were burning.

The scene about Mooselake, the centre of the burned area, beggars description. The country for twenty miles around is a smouldering ruin, with perhaps only six or seven buildings standing. Temporary morgues contain eighty unrecognisable bodies, and close to Mooselake bodies of seventeen men, women and children were found in a cellar. The towns of Cloquet, Brookstown, Brevator, Corona, Adolph, Thompson, like Mooselake, have been completely wiped out.

SINN FEIN AND MR. T. M. HEALY, M.P.

The following is a copy of a letter forwarded by the Hon. Secretaries of the Sinn Fein Executive to Mr. T. M. Healy, K.C., M.P., inviting him immediately to carry out his offer to resign his seat:—

6 Harcourt street, Dublin,
October 12th, 1918.

DEAR SIR,—In reference to your letter to the Secretary of the Cumann na mBan meeting at the Mansion House, last week, the Sinn Fein Executive have directed us to say that they welcome your proposal to resign, as a protest against the treatment of Sinn Fein prisoners, and think it would be most effective if carried into effect immediately. They further direct us to say that they highly appreciate the unselfish and patriotic motives that inspire you to take this action.—Is mise le meas mor.

THE LEINSTER.

MANY FUNERALS IN DUBLIN.

INQUEST AT KINGSTOWN.

PUBLIC BODIES AND THE OUTRAGE.

Public feeling with regard to the tragedy of the Leinster showed little or no abatement yesterday. If there was a tendency to forget it anywhere, that tendency was counteracted by the numerous funerals which were to be seen passing towards the cemeteries, and by the groups of persons, composed mainly of women, who congregated around the City Morgue and at the mortuaries of certain of the hospitals. What might be described as an unbroken procession of funerals wended their way to Glasnevin Cemetery yesterday.

The Morgue received in all sixty-seven bodies, and of these all that remained yesterday morning were fifteen. Of these, eight were women, two little girls, and a boy. The following were identified from among them during the afternoon:—Robert Kerr (of Essex), Reuben Ellis, an elderly man, Military Barracks, Cork, and his grandson. These were identified by the Rev. Father Fitzmaurice, of Cork. The other bodies identified were those of Shiela Plunkett, London road, and William Paspar, Brooklyn terrace, South Circular road, Dublin.

A number of persons from a distance visited the Morgue during the day in search of missing friends or relatives who had been passengers on the Leinster, most of them without avail.

The remains of the following seven members of the ship's crew were yesterday placed on a steamer at the North Wall and conveyed to Holyhead, where their families reside, and where they will be interred:—Third Officer L. B. Micklin, Hannah Owens, second stewardess; Robert Anthony, Griffith Williams, Owen Jones, Philip Michael, and Thomas Williams.

LORD FRENCH AND THE SURVIVORS.

Viscount French visited St. Michael's Hospital, Kingstown, yesterday, and spoke to the survivors of the torpedoed R.M.S. Leinster who are patients in the institution. He congratulated them upon their escape, and wished them a complete and speedy recovery. He was conducted through the institution by the Mother Superior and Dr. McDermott and Dr. Moloney.

LINCOLN IRISHMEN AND THE CRIME.

The following telegram has been received by the Lord Lieutenant:—"Irishmen of Lincoln most respectfully tender through Your Excellency deepest sympathy to relatives of the victims of the ill-fated Leinster, and hope that this fiendish crime, which cries aloud to Heaven for vengeance, will fire the youth of Ireland to join the recruiting scheme and aid to give the final knock-out blow to the murderers of our countrymen.—(Signed) Patrick J. Noonan, 56 Monson street, Lincoln."

"WANTON DESTRUCTION OF INNOCENT PERSONS."

Yesterday, at St. Michael's Hospital, Kingstown, Mr. W. A. Rafferty, Coroner for South County Dublin, and a jury, of which Mr. Richard Shackleton was foreman, held an inquest on two of the victims of the torpedoed Leinster.

The Coroner, in opening the inquest, said:—The inquiry which we are going to hold is on some of the victims of the Royal Mail steamer Leinster, which was torpedoed by enemy action on Thursday. I condemn in the strongest manner this action of the enemy, which has caused the wanton destruction of so many innocent persons—men, women, and children. I take this opportunity to express my deep sympathy with the relatives of the deceased persons, and to hope that those who are still suffering from the effects of the disaster will soon completely recover. I trust that a substantial fund may be raised for those families who have lost their means of support, so as to enable them to meet all their requirements. Many of those who were lost belonged to this township, and were well known to the residents. We are now going to inquire into the death of two of the victims. All of the bodies have been identified, and I have been requested by the family of one of them to investigate the circumstances under which they met their death. I will now deal with the first case, that of a man named Shawe-Jones. Representations have been made to me that the body has to be conveyed to England, and that it cannot be buried without a burial certificate. My position is such that I cannot issue a burial certificate without an inquest being held, and that is why we are holding a formal inquest on the deceased John Shawe-Jones. I will adjourn the other case to this day week, at the same hour and place, so as to give time to the witnesses to be present.

Mr. Edward Anderson, Secretary to the National Shell Factory, Dublin, Richmond avenue, Palmerston Park, identified the body of John Shawe-Jones. He was an auditor connected with the Ministry of Munitions, London, married, and aged about 37.

Dr. J. A. Moloney, House Surgeon, St. Michael's Hospital, stated that he received the body of Shawe-Jones about 5 or 6 o'clock on Thursday evening. There were no injuries on the body.

The jury returned a verdict that death was due to drowning, and stated that the vessel was sunk by enemy action.

The Coroner said that, as regarded the body of Miss Georgina O'Brien, as to which an inquest had been specially asked, he did not intend to go on with the case that day. He wished just to have evidence of identification of the body so as to allow the burial, and then there could be an adjournment.

Mr. Gavan Duffy (instructed by Messrs. Little, Doyle, and Woods), on behalf of the next-of-kin, said that he would not object to an adjournment until Thursday next.

The Coroner—Will you be prepared to bring up witnesses?

Mr. Duffy said as to that he would ask for the issue of subpœnas to a number of witnesses. When they had expressed all the indignation they felt, and qualified, as it should be qualified, the cruelty of this terrible act, they had not completely performed the duty that devolved upon them, and he thought that it would be fair to those concerned to state the reasons why his client desired an investigation in the shape of an inquest to be held.

Mr. H. Hanna, K.C., on behalf of the Attorney-General, respectfully asked that no statement be made about Miss O'Brien's case until the investigation came on. The matter should be allowed to stand over until things could proceed in the usual regular manner.

Mr. Duffy said that he had no desire to prejudge the case, but he wished to put the Court in a position to know the witnesses that he would subpœna. He would ask that subpœnas be addressed to a number of persons connected with the shipping company concerned. They were Mr. Edward Watson, chairman; Mr. Richard Jones, secretary; Mr. Patrick Crangle, chief officer; and, subject to what the company might say, the second officer, Mr. Addison. He thought that they should also have Mr. James Carraher, boatswain; Mr. Patrick Loughlin, quarter-deck man; and Mr. Sweeney, travelling ticket-collector. In addition, he wanted the wireless operator at Kingstown.

Mr. Hanna—Would my learned friend hand in a list of witnesses?

Mr. Duffy said that he would do so, and added there was one other witness that he desired—Mr. Billington, of the Wexford Harbour Board.

Mr. Denis Henry, K.C., M.P., who (instructed by Messrs. Baker, Ringwood, and Gordon) appeared for the City of Dublin Steam Packet Company, said that the company desired to give every assistance in the course of the inquiry. They felt deep sympathy with the relatives of those who had been lost in the terrible occurrence, as well as with the passengers who had been saved. Especially did they sympathise with the relatives of Captain Birch and the brave seamen associated with him, as well as the Postal officials, who had for so many years been connected with the company, and all of whom had died like brave men.

Mr. Hanna, K.C., on behalf of the Attorney-General, also expressed sympathy with the victims' relatives.

At a later stage, the body of Miss O'Brien arrived at the hospital from the Dublin City Morgue, and was identified by Mr. Joachim Coffey, Charlemont avenue, Kingstown, who stated that she was unmarried and aged 28. She was employed as a clerk at the Irish Linen Stores, New Bond street, London. He saw her last on Wednesday evening, and knew that she was a passenger on the Leinster.

The inquest was adjourned to Thursday at 2.30 p.m.

PUBLIC BODIES AND THE OUTRAGE.

At the meeting of the Pembroke Urban Council last evening, the Chairman (Mr. C. P. O'Neill) said that before any business was transacted he was sure it was the wish of every member that they should extend a vote of sympathy to the relatives of those who were so cruelly murdered by the Germans through the sinking of the Leinster. Words at such a time were very poor, but one was safe in saying that no person in the whole country failed to sympathise with the sufferers. There was a good deal of indignation in certain quarters owing to the absence of an escort. He himself was not in a position—not knowing all the facts—to say exactly how the matter stood, but a good many people were under the impression that there had been neglect on the part of the authorities in not providing an escort. He pro-

SPECIAL EXTRA.

AMERICAN PRESS AND THE GERMAN REPLY.

The newspapers of New York and throughout the United States, having had time to digest Dr. Solf's reply, declare that if Germany desires peace unconditional surrender should be required. Here are two typical comments:

The Herald says that there must be an immediate transfer to the armies of the victorious Allies of all German arms and munitions, and the unconditional surrender must be followed by the punishment demanded by justice.

The World says that, coming from any honest, respectable Government, such a reply might safely be accepted as unconditional surrender. Coming from the German Government, it must be accepted for what it is—an offer of surrender without any security whatsoever for the compliance with any provisions or promise.

DARING AMERICAN AIRMEN.

THRILLING EXPLOIT IN THE ADRIATIC.

A Correspondent writes from an American Adriatic seaplane station, October —:—

A fight, a jammed gun, a fall into the sea, and a gallant rescue are the elements of a story of air and sea that ranks high among the heroic achievements of Americans in the aerial warfare of the Adriatic. Upon an American squadron at this station had fallen the duty of sending a patrol to the port of Pola. The patrol was a mixed one, composed partly of fast machines and partly of lighter chasse machines. They started away from their station on Italian soil at half-past ten in the morning. The operation involved only a short flight of about an hour to Pola, which was reached without mishap or adventure. There, however, they encountered a strong patrol of five enemy land machines of a heavy type, apparently the well-known Albatross pattern, which considerably outnumbered and heavily outgunned the American patrol. The American light chasse planes were at a height of 3,800 metres when the enemy was sighted. Two things were evident as probabilities—one, that in a stern chase the Albatrosses could close with them and, perhaps, bring down the slower and heavier American machines, and the other that they stood the best chance by attacking the enemy at once. The decision to attack was taken at once. The signal was given to the chasse machines to drop to a lower altitude and engage the enemy at once, and the heavier and slower American machines were ordered to make good their escape. Outnumbered at the start, the American chasses were soon in an even worse position, for the plane of one of the flying officers, Ensign Johannsen, after a short fight, was compelled to retire; springs in the cartridge clips broke, the gun jammed, and, as far as fighting was concerned, the battle was over for him.

Meanwhile the enemy was not having all his own way. Ensign Ludlow, who had engaged two enemy machines singlehanded, had apparently perforated the radiator of one of them, and had the satisfaction of seeing the Albatross pull out of the fight, leaving a stream of white vapour escaping as he fled. Nevertheless, this defeat of one of the enemy brought him no immediate relief, for another Albatross closed in to support, and attacked by these two his own machine began to suffer in the fight. His right magneto was shot off, his propeller was struck and partly splintered, and his engine-crank case was hit, letting out all the lubricant. While he stuck to the fight his motor caught fire in the air. It might seem that this would have finished matters as far as he was concerned, but Ensign Ludlow was an aviator of more than common resource. He at once cut off, and began a deliberate nose spin. This had the effect of putting out the flames just in time before the gas tank had been reached or the wings had caught fire. Straightening out, he landed on the water five miles from Pola.

TO THE RESCUE.

While this fight was going on, Qurtermaster C. H. Hammann had been carrying on his own share in the fight, doubtless with an eye all the time on the movements of Ensign Ludlow, his commander. Seeing that the latter had gone down to the water in the close neighbourhood of Pola, he immediately concluded that this was an occasion for immediate action if Ludlow was to be saved. In the hail of the fight he immediately simulated a disaster of his own. He plunged on an immediate nose dive, leaving his assailants to come to an obvious conclusion—namely, that he had been put out of action and might be reckoned as done with. But he, too, at the end of his dive, straightened out, and manœuvred his 'plane to within hailing distance of Ensign Ludlow. There was a perfect understanding between them; Ludlow, as soon as he perceived the approach of Quartermaster Hammann, at once opened the camera slot in the bottom of the boat to fill it with water, at the same time kicking holes in the sides and slashing the covering of the wings. Then, as Hammann brought his 'plane closer in, Ensign Ludlow cast himself adrift from his sinking 'plane, and swam through a choppy sea to that of his companion. There he hung on to the tail of the machine while Hammann performed the first duty of the downed aviator, the destruction of the wrecked machine to prevent it falling into the hands of the enemy. He fired into it a hundred or so rounds of ammunition from his machine gun till the question of its remaining afloat was beyond all doubt, and then he turned to the question of the rescue of his officer.

ENSIGN'S NOVEL POSITION.

The carrying capacity of the chaser machine is not such as to permit of the transport of passengers, especially after a fight, when the 'planes are riddled with shot-holes. All that could be done was to get Ensign Ludlow to hang on, lying flat under the engine. This so altered the balance of the 'plane that there was some doubt about its getting off the water. The power was put on. The sea was running three feet high, with the short dangerous seas of the Adriatic, and at the first attempt to take off Hammann had the misfortune to smash the bow of his boat. He butted on, and with good fortune was in a moment clear. He got, as he afterwards reported, "into the air quite safely," and once in the "safe" air, and out of the dangerous sea, he headed for the haven of his desire, this Adriatic seaplane station. All this time there had been the possibility of his being attacked both from the air by the Albatrosses and from Pola, where his gallant rescue of his commander must have been easily visible. No doubt, the Albatrosses thought better of it, and, at any rate, they were being kept well employed by others of the squadron. Ludlow, hanging on underneath the engine, introduced a new problem of dynamics into the manœuvring of his 'plane, which had been built for quite other stresses and another kind of balance, and had not been constructed with a view to its subsequent use as an emergency rescue boat. Into his feelings as he lay there it is impossible for the lay mind to enter; but for his nerve it may be said that he never lost his sense of the humorousness of his position, for as he flew over inland water towards the base on the last miles of the flight he waved his hand to some amazed Italians. He records that they were struck too dumb to wave back.

FURTHER ADVENTURE.

The flight did not end without further adventure. He made the normal landing that might have been expected of a pilot of his skill, but here the extra weight told once more, and, just as rising into the air had presented new problems, so the descent to the water was not lightly solved. Owing to the extra weight, and to the fact that his boat had a large hole in her, the 'plane, after a few yards' clean travel on the surface, nosed down and turned over. Both pilots fell out—it did not take much to dislodge Ensign Ludlow from his precarious holding-place—and both were promptly picked up by a motor boat from the base. Then it was found that Ludlow had received a great gash on his forehead, and that Hammann had suffered a strained side and shoulder. By any law of averages it was cheap at the price.

It is not for the outsider to comment on such an Odyssey of gallantry, and the rest is best told in the stirring, though plain, words of their commanding officer's recommendation:—

The work done by Hammann in going to the aid of Ludlow immediately was a fine exhibition of courage and headwork on his part, and his being able to get off the water with a single-seater chasse machine with two people aboard and bring Ludlow safely back was an excellent performance, and he is deserving of a great deal of credit for his quick action and good judgment. . . . It is, therefore, recommended that Quartermaster Hammann be given the Distinguished Service Cross of the United States Government, if it is possible to present this to naval aviators, or with some other fitting decoration, for his very creditable act. It is also recommended that Ensign George H. Ludlow be commended for his action.

KING MANOEL AT THE IRISH COUNTIES' WAR HOSPITAL.

King Manoel accompanied by the Earl of Donoughmore and Colonel Hill, inspected on Monday morning the Irish Counties War Hospital, Marlborough Hall, Glasnevin. He was received by Lieutenant-Colonel Seton Pringle, R.A.M.C., in charge of the hospital, and the following members of the Committee:—C. Wisdom Hely, J.P. (Chairman), Lord Chief Justice Molony, Mr. William Geoghegan, M.B.E.; and Mr. D. J. Kelly. The hospital medical staff were also present, including Major W. G. Harvey, M.D., R.A.M.C.; Captain H. de L. Crawford, M.D., R.A.M.C.; Doctors Coyne and Gregg, and Messrs. Greer and Shannon. Sister Fanning (Acting Matron) and Mr. Litton Cary, Secretary, were also in attendance.

King Manoel closely inspected all the wards and operating theatre, conversing with several of the patients, and took a keen interest in a number of mechanical and other toys made by the patients, which were shown to His Majesty by the Misses Sibthorpe, Culwick, and other members of the Ladies' Committee. Before leaving His Majesty expressed himself highly satisfied with all the hospital arrangements, and the healthy and beautiful situation of the hospital. He complimented those responsible for the management and the excellent way in which the work was being carried out.

DUBLIN DIOCESAN SYNOD.

ARCHBISHOP AND IRELAND'S DUTY.

THE "IRISH LEAGUE OF NATIONS."

The annual session of the Dublin Diocesan Synod was held yesterday in the Synod Hall, Christchurch place. The Archbishop of Dublin presided. There was a large attendance of clerical and lay members.

The Archdeacon of Dublin read the opening prayers.

The Lord Chancellor acted as Assessor.

The President informed the Synod that Rev. Canon H. B. Kennedy, the clerical hon. secretary, was detained in England owing to the serious illness of a soldier son, and Captain J. R. W. Thompson, the lay hon. secretary, was also unable to attend, being confined to his house suffering from a chill.

Both gentlemen were re-elected hon. secretaries, and Rev. Canon Mervyn and Mr. J. A. Maconchy were appointed to act in their absence as hon. secretaries.

Mr. Maconchy then read the minutes of last session, which were adopted.

DIOCESAN NOMINATORS.

The Dean of St. Patrick's, Rev. Canon J. C. Dowse, and Mr. A. W. Samuels, M.P., Attorney-General, were re-elected diocesan nominators.

The following were elected on the supplemental list:—Clergy—The Dean of Christ Church, the Archdeacon of Dublin, and Rev. J. C. Irwin. Lay—Captain Wade Thompson and Mr. Maconchy.

PRESIDENT'S ADDRESS.

The President, who was received with applause, delivered his address as follows:—Since our last meeting one of our oldest and most respected clergymen has passed to his reward. Canon Carleton spent nearly forty years of his long ministerial life in this diocese, and those whose privilege it was to be his friends knew how high his ideals were and how holy was his example. He was a learned and saintly man, and we are the poorer by his passing from our midst. We have to regret the loss of five of our lay members—Sir William Watson, prominent as a citizen and a Churchman; Mr. S. A. O. FitzPatrick, and Mr. William Hayes, whose services to the cause of education, foreign missions, and temperance we gratefully remember; Mr. McComas, of St. Bartholomew's, and Mr. Kempster, of Monkstown. The anxieties and sorrows of the war have been very great during the past twelve months, and still continue, although to our prayers we are now able to add hearty thanksgiving for the victories of the King and his Allies in many parts of the world. The deliverance of Palestine from the domination of a Mohammedan Power is an event in Christian history of conspicuous importance, and we may trust our Christian Allies to see to it that the Holy Land remains henceforth under Christian rule, however urgent may be the claim of Turkish diplomacy or of Jewish national sentiment.

THE TRAGEDY OF THE LEINSTER.

But, for the moment, the tremendous operations of war in France, in Serbia, in Italy, in Mesopotamia are, perhaps, less in our thoughts than the tragedy of last week in the Irish Sea, when more than five hundred men and women, many of them known to us personally, were killed by the attack of a German submarine upon one of our splendid mail boats. One of my old college class-fellows and brother class-fellows, Mr. James Roberts, is among the dead. I knew also Sir W. Henry Thompson, the distinguished Professor of Physiology; in another walk of life, Alderman McCarron, a Labour leader, and a member of the Irish Convention, with whom I was associated all through last autumn and winter; in yet another, Lady Phyllis Hamilton, the Duke of Abercorn's sister. Each of us has his own list of friends to lament, I do not doubt. We honour their memory as the memory of those whom the bitterness of war has called to die, and our most true and respectful sympathy goes out to the bereaved and stricken homes now in mourning. We have had a terrible illustration of the perils of war; we have been taught, if we needed to be taught, that Ireland is not immune, and that Germany will spare neither men, women, nor children of Irish homes if she can strike a blow at our fighting men. Everyone who goes on a sea journey now takes his life in his hand, and many of those who made the great sacrifice last week knew it well. But they faced the peril boldly, for they were "on duty." They had work to do for the country, and they did not flinch. I hope that spirit may never be lacking in the men and women of the Church of Ireland.

THE DUTY OF IRISHMEN.

I do not know if this horror will stimulate the supply of recruits from Ireland. I have spoken so often about the duty incumbent on our young men to join the fighting forces of the Allied nations, and to place themselves beside the brave men from America who are determined that the freedom of the world must be saved, that I do not propose to say much about it to-day. I will only repeat what I said two years ago from this place. If we fail to do our utmost, and do not send to fight every available man that we have got, we shall live to rue our apathy and half-heartedness; we shall be ashamed in the face of Christendom in the days to come. (Hear, hear.)

EXAMPLE OF THE CLERGY.

Our young clergy have set a fine example. We all knew that they would, but it is right that we should recognise it. Last May I communicated with the rural Deans on the subject of the possible release of a larger number of our clergy for work with the fighting forces, and I also was in correspondence with Sir Auckland Geddes, the head of the Ministry of National Service. The rural Deans held meetings of the clergy in their deaneries, and I would like to say that I was profoundly impressed, although not surprised, by the eagerness to serve on the part of young and old. One rural Dean wrote to me, and this expressed the general feeling:—"We were already shorthanded in these dioceses, but we managed, somehow, to release nine or ten men more in the past year for work as chaplains to the Army and Navy." (Applause.) I will only name one of them, the late curate of Sandford, Mr. Eyre-Powell, and I name him because he was killed by shell-fire shortly after he went to France, while holding a Service for a Labour battalion. He went out, as he told me, not because he cared for the life of an Army chaplain, but because he felt it to be his duty, and there is this, too, to be said—several more of our young rectors—some of them not very young—came to me and said: "We will go if you say we ought." I thought these men were more useful at home, and told them so. And, like loyal men, they have kept to their good work for the diocese. I do not mention their names, but I wish the lay members of the Synod to know of this offer, which involved a real sacrifice from married men with families. Several of our rectors who could not be spared as permanent chaplains went for four months in the summer with the Church Army and with the Y.M.C.A., and they have come back with wonderful memories of what they have seen.

A DISTINGUISHED CHAPLAIN.

This is only the record of the past year. Many chaplains who had gone from us at an earlier period are still, happily, at work, among them one who seems to get a decoration every year. Mr. Thom, formerly of St. Catherine's, has now got a second Bar to his Military Cross. The official report states:—

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty in remaining throughout in an advanced aid post. He also went up to the front line in the daylight, in full view of enemy machine guns and snipers, visiting the wounded and comforting the dying, and superintending the burial of the dead under heavy shell fire.

I hope I do not weary you with these details, but we are all proud of these men. Of lay members of our Church and diocese, very many have done their duty. From the Dublin Boys' Brigade alone, no less than 2,300 young men have joined the Army and Navy—a fine record, and independent of what has been done by the Church Lads' Brigade and the Boy Scouts. There are still among us some who hold back for various reasons, but our Church has certainly done well, and if other denominations had done as well there would be little cause for complaint. (Applause.) Among those who went

WOUNDED, MISSING, AND PRISONERS.

BRITISH RED CROSS AND ST. JOHN.—Searches made free. Apply Hon. Sec., Enquiry Department, 51 Dawson street, Dublin.

Colonel Theodore Montgomery Archdale, D.S.O., Royal Horse Artillery, who died on 10th inst., was the youngest son of the late Mr. Nicholas M. Archdale, J.P., Crock-na-Crieve, Ballinamallard, Co. Fermanagh. Born in 1873, he entered the Army in 1894, became Captain 1901, Major 1911, Lieutenant-Colonel 1915, and Colonel 1917. He served in South Africa, 1899-1900, and was present at the relief of Ladysmith (mentioned in despatches, clasp, and D.S.O.). During the present war he was wounded. Colonel Archdale was married in 1901 to Helen Alexander, daughter of the late Mr. Alexander Russell, editor of the Scotsman.

Lieutenant Hugh Glancy, Royal Munster Fusiliers, killed in action, was a son of Mr. B. Glancy, Cathedral Hill, Armagh. He was shot in a raid. Before the war he was in the Customs and Excise. His brother is in the Royal Dublin Fusiliers.

Lieutenant Barry S. Close, Irish Guards, who was killed in action on September 27th, was the only son of Mr. and Mrs. Henry Close, late of Clyde road, Dublin, and grandson of the late Mr. Maxwell C. Close, D.L., of Drumbanagher, Co. Armagh. He obtained his commision, after being educated at Eton College and Sandhurst, on May 1st, 1917. He took part in the fighting in Flanders, where he was wounded. He rejoined his regiment in January, 1918, and returned to France in March, and was actively engaged in the severe fighting at Nieppe, where the Irish Guards so heroically stayed the German advance. He fell while leading his platoon, after going through the Hindenburg support line, on his 21st birthday.

Second Lieutenant Arthur A. Gault, Royal Dublin Fusiliers, who has died of wounds, was the only son of Mr. John Gault, Belgrano, Larne Harbour. He was formerly in business with Messrs. H. and E. Musgrave, Ltd., Belfast, and represented that firm in Dublin. He was afterwards on the staff of Messrs. Peek Bros. and Winch, Ltd., tea importers, London. He received his commission in the Royal Dublin Fusiliers on 30th January, 1918.

DUBLIN AND DISTRICT.

Soldiers' Rendezvous, Lower Abbey street.—At the meeting of the Committee of the Soldiers' Rendezvous, Lower Abbey street, Dublin, held on Tuesday last, the Chairman referred to the honour conferred on two of their members, Mrs. Bagnall and Mrs. W. M. Elliott, whose names appeared amongst those who had been brought to the notice of the Secretary of State for War for valuable services rendered for the benefit of the Naval and Military Forces. They were to be heartily congratulated on this well-deserved distinction.

Bray Picture House Burned.—The picture house in Florence road, Bray, known as the "Gaiety," of which Mrs. Boyne was the proprietress, was burned down yesterday morning. When the fire was discovered the local fire brigade were called out, but the flames had obtained a complete hold on the premises, which were completely destroyed.

The Dublin Licensed Trade.—At the annual Licensing Sessions in Dublin yesterday the Recorder, addressing Mr. Healy, K.C., said that it was a matter of great pride and gratification to him that the licensed trade had come in, and assisted him in what he urged in endeavouring to prevent the growth of anything in the nature of mala-fide traffic. Mr. Healy said that any undertaking given on behalf of the trade had been absolutely carried out.

Licensed Grocers' Association.—At a special meeting of the Committee of the Licensed Grocers' and Vintners' Association, held yesterday in the offices, Commercial Buildings, Dublin, at which the Chairman (Mr. James T. Ryan) presiding, and at which the Vice-Chairman (Mr. John Walters) and practically all the members were present, a resolution of sympathy with their colleague, Mr. Thomas F. Meagher, on the death of his son, was carried unanimously. In putting that resolution, the Chairman said it was unnecessary to say how much they all sympathised with their colleague. The Vice-Chairman seconded the resolution, which was supported by Mr. Michael Brereton, Mr. M. Fanning, Mr. C. Kennedy, Mr. O'Grady, Mr. Delahunty, and other members.

NEW ISSUE.

THE AIRCRAFT MANUFACTURING COMPANY, LIMITED.

The British, Foreign, and Colonial Corporation, Ltd., 57 Bishopsgate, London, E.C. 2, are receiving through their bankers—the London Joint City and Midland Bank and Lloyd's Bank—applications for the purchase of £250,000 7 per cent. Short Term Notes of £50 each at par. Interest will be paid twice yearly—namely, 1st April and 1st October. The Notes will be redeemed at £57 10s. per Note by five equal annual drawings of 1,000 Notes each, over a period of five years commencing 1st October, 1921, or earlier, at the company's option, but at the same premium of 15 per cent. The capital expenditure on land, buildings, plant, and machinery for the purpose of extensions since the outbreak of war to the 31st March, 1918, amounted to £386,664. Upon the basis of the profits for the year ending 31st March, 1918, the fixed interest on the Notes is covered more than ten times, and, including the proceeds of the present issue, these Notes will be covered by assets to the extent of more than £175 for each £50 subscribed. Allowing for the profit on redemption, the average yield of the Notes is 10 per cent. The company is engaged in the manufacture of aeroplanes, motors, and parts of every description. Most types of aeroplanes used, either at home for school work or at the front for war, are constructed by the company, and the business does not depend on the manufacture of any special type of aeroplane or engine, but is of a most varied nature. Contracts in hand to-day are in excess of any previous records, and it is to cope with this large volume of business that the new capital is required. The subscription list closes on or before Monday next. An application form for the use of intending subscribers will be found in our advertisement columns.

Controllers. They hoped this year that the pièce de résistance would be the farmers, and to give them a chance they never had before. In the past they had received from farmers a great deal of kindness and assistance, and gift sales and jumble sales had been productive of very substantial sums, and they were grateful for it; but he did not think that the farmers had yet been given a proper opportunity. This year it was proposed to form a section for them, and Mr. Laidlaw, with the assistance of the salesmasters, proposed to start a central committee which would get together a gift sale, and they hoped sub-committees might be formed throughout the country. Mr. Laidlaw had promised to act as chairman of the central committee, and the salesmasters had been no doubt that it would be a very important section.

THE AGRICULTURAL SIDE.

From the Department of Agriculture, through Sir Thomas Russell, and the I.A.O.S., through Sir Horace Plunkett, they had received a good deal of assistance in many ways, and were asking boldly for 1,000 cattle, 2,000 sheep, 3,000 pigs, and 5,000 fowl, and also for corn, potatoes, butter, eggs, and anything that came from the land. They hoped that farmers would support them by contributions, rather than in money. There was a novel collection this year called the tree section, with Lord Headfort and Lord Powerscourt as Controllers, and Mr. Fletcher as Secretary, asking for a tree, two trees, or a wood, and donors would be put in touch with the nearest timber merchant, who would take down the trees. Sir William Ball, Timber Controller to the Board of Trade; the Native Timber Merchants' Association, through Mr. Russell, and the Royal Horticultural Society would assist. Then, a collection of jewellery, gold, and silver had been started, and of that Lady Powerscourt was to be Controller. A shop had been taken at 29 Grafton street, and they hoped that this collection would be a great success. Mrs. Henry Jackson's services as Hon. Secretary had been secured. The professions would be worked through Mr. Orpen, and they had asked the Attorney-General to deal with the Bench, the Bar, and the solicitors. Entertainments and theatricals would be in the hands of Sir Stanley Cochrane, with Mr. Herbert Bailey as Controller. Sports, races, golf, football, baseball, boxing, and other sports would be managed by Mr. Fred Myerscough; dances by Mrs. Cryan, and schools by Mr. Moore.

THE HELP OF THE CHILDREN.

This year they wanted every child in the country to have an opportunity of helping and for each to collect at least 1d. for every year of its age. They were also starting a train of pennies, and wanted to make it long enough to cross the Irish Sea. That would be in the hands of Lady Arnott—a fact which was sufficient to ensure that that section would be well worked up. (Applause.) Mr. David Frame was acting as Controller of Cinemas. On October 13, 14, 15, and 16 the Hon. Mrs. Barry was to start in the Mansion House a French flower market. The Committee realised that many persons in the past had been very good, but there were many who had not contributed, and would have now an opportunity to do so. They were glad to feel that they had again the assistance of the Irish Times, to which they owed a big debt for its patriotism in helping the Fund—(applause)—and were proud to have as Trustee again Sir John Arnott. It was hoped to obtain the co-operation of the entire Press. In the country the county directors would be in supreme control, but it was hoped that they would, as far as possible, adopt the sectional scheme, which it was believed would produce the best results.

ULSTER'S RIVALRY.

Last year Ulster challenged the other provinces in friendly rivalry, and the challenge was accepted, with the result that the three provinces won handsomely. If Ulster wished to throw the gauntlet into the arena again, they would be glad to pick it up in the friendliest spirit. They had to live up to the reputation they had earned. As far as the Red Cross was concerned, this country could hold its head high, but they were still on trial, and not until that campaign was over could judgment be made. He felt sure that in asking for assistance they were not asking in vain. (Applause.)

REV. T. A. FINLAY.

Rev. T. A. Finlay, proposing a vote of thanks to the speakers, drew a mental picture of a battlefield, where men were slaughtering each other with instruments of destruction. On the other side there were the forces of human sympathy, human pity, and human tenderness, marshalled for the relief of suffering, staying the hand of death, assuaging anguish, mutilation, and disease, and opening despairing eyes to the prospects of health and continued existence. The world was sick of war, and with good reason. Never before had humanity witnessed its horrors brought home to their consciousness with such force as during these recent years. Never before had the responsible rulers of men shown such a disposition to prevent its recurrence. And they might, perhaps, indulge in the hope at least that soon this horror would disappear from among men, and that the Army would become no longer an organised engine of destruction, but would be an international police preserving an international peace. (Applause.) When that millenium comes, if it ever does come, the men of future time will read with a shudder the last chaper in the awful war that is now closing; but at the same time they will read of the acts of devotion and self-sacrifice rendered by volunteers of mercy and pity on behalf of the wounded and suffering, and that record will be preserved when what are called the glorious annals of war are relegated to the dust heap. In the Red Cross Society and other associations of mercy and love we have before us what is best and worthiest in human nature, and goes some distance to repair the horrors and desecration of war. (Applause.)

SIR T. W. RUSSELL.

Sir Thomas Russell, seconding the motion, said that there was scarcely anything in the country which commanded such universal approval as the Red Cross and its work. When it was mentioned that the farmers would be asked to contribute to the fund this year, he saw something like a smile flit across some faces. That ought not to be. The farmers had done very well. They had grown corn and potatoes to feed the Army. Let that be said for them; and when the call was made for hard cash he believed they would respond to it. He felt sure that all sections of the Irish people, putting aside the foolish ideas that ought never to have existed, would rally to the support of the Red Cross. (Applause.)

The motion was carried with acclamation.

This ended the proceedings.

DUBLIN DIOCESAN SYNOD.

and died none was more gallant than a boy from St. Kevin's Parish, Lieutenant J. S. Emerson, of the Inniskilling Fusiliers, who was awarded the highest military distinction that the Sovereign can give, the Victoria Cross. (Applause.) We are proud of his splendid death, and his rector tells me that we may give thanks, too, for his consistent Christian life.

THE FREEDOM OF THE WORLD.

To what end is all this gallantry and devotion? Let us be clear about the answer. It is to ensure the freedom of the world, which was so terribly in danger, and this freedom can only come through the defeat, final and complete, of the militarism of Prussia. That is the first and immediate aim of our Armies, and it ought to be the immediate aim of us all. When it is accomplished—but it cannot be until then, and it is not accomplished yet—I trust that Christian statesmanship may be able to establish a League of Nations which will be effective in diminishing the menace of war, and which will secure the world's peace by guarantees more permanent and powerful than mere treaties or undertakings, or professions of goodwill. Such a League is, indeed, an ideal after which we should strive, each in our place and station. Its objects and aims have been described by Lord Grey and Lord Bryce in terms which we shall do well to study. For the thing is very difficult of accomplishment, far more difficult than many good people seem to understand. And premature pronouncements upon its methods of operation are very much to be deprecated, in the interests of any abiding peace. I have been invited to become a member of the Council of the League of Nations Society, but I have felt constrained to decline the honour, admirable and Christian as its ideals are. It may seriously embarrass our statesmen, if ill-considered or hasty proposals are put forward now, or if any considerable section of the nation is pledged in advance by restrictions which may have logical consequences not yet realised. (Hear, hear.) I speak only for myself in this; but I think it unwise to be talking about world conditions under the reign of universal peace, when the best energies of our wisest people are now engaged, and rightly engaged, in the vigorous prosecution of war. (Hear, hear.)

IRISH LEAGUE OF NATIONS SOCIETY.

And I deprecate very specially the association of our Church folk with a smaller organisation—quite distinct from that which I have named—calling itself "The Irish League of Nations Society." The driving force behind this, so far as I can form an opinion, is the desire that Ireland, as distinct from the rest of the United Kingdom, shall be specially represented by delegates at the Peace Conference when it comes. If there is any section of men in Europe who have no claim whatever to be represented at the Peace Conference—(applause)—it is that section of Irishmen who refuse to fight for the cause of the Allied nations, and who prefer to stay quietly at home fomenting sedition, while they are protected from the perils of war by the Navies of the United Kingdom and of America. (Applause.) As to the absurd and fantastic dreams of an Irish Republic, which some cherish, I say: "Securus judicat orbis terrarum." (Applause.) The civilised world on both sides of the Atlantic has formed its judgment already on such a policy. And for this reason I hope our Church people will not have anything to do with the Irish League of Nations Society. If a League of Nations is formed hereafter, as I hope it will be formed, small countries will get fair treatment we may be sure. And there I leave the matter for your consideration.

DUTY OF CHURCHMEN.

The pre-occupations of the war are so engrossing that I do not make any apology for speaking about it, rather than about the lesser, although to us important details of our Church policy. For the war is with us still. It is not yet ended. Do not think it. And until it is ended, happily and victoriously, by God's blessing, let us not betray our dead by talking rather than acting. Many of us cannot do anything very heroic in the way of national service. Let us do the thing, whatever it is, which is next to our hand, better than ever we did before. Save coal in your churches and in your houses. You must save it, for there will not be enough for comfort this winter. There would be more in Ireland if 50,000 Irishmen were to release 50,000 miners who are now fighting. (Applause.) Save coal, save food. There may be a long way to go still. And, meantime, do not dispute about petty issues. Do not grumble. Let us, at least, show our fellow-countrymen that we are ready to bear the burden which this war of freedom has laid upon us. They will not think the less of us for that, whether they follow our example or no. And, above all, let us consecrate our work in prayer and sacrament that it may tend towards the betterment of our own land, towards the brotherhood of the nations, and towards the enlargement of the Kingdom of our Master, Christ. (Applause.)

VOTE OF SYMPATHY.

On the motion of the Archdeacon of Dublin, seconded by the Lord Chancellor, the following resolution was unanimously passed, in silence, the members standing:—

That this Synod desires to record its horror at the sinking of ss. Leinster, involving the loss of over 500 lives, including those of many women and children. The Synod expresses its deep and respectful sympathy with the bereaved families in their sorrow.

REPORT OF COUNCIL.

The adoption of the report of the Diocesan Council (a synopsis of which has already been published) was moved by the Archdeacon, seconded by Mr. Maconchy.

The Rev. T. C. Hammond moved that the report be adopted, it being understood that the Synod expressed no opinion on the recommendations set out on page 25 of the report. The recommendations referred to suggested the amalgamation of a number of parishes in the diocese.

Mr. W. C. Stubbs seconded the motion, which was agreed to, and the report adopted.

TEMPERANCE.

The Rev. W. Baillie, in proposing the adoption of the report of the Church of Ireland Temperance Society, said temperance was one of the greatest national questions they possibly could deal with. As an intense and loyal lover of the Church, he did not think they were doing their duty as a Church in this matter. The drink trade called itself "the trade," as if it were the king of all trades. Most of the trades of the country produced articles for the benefit of the people, and in some cases converted waste into useful articles; but what was the case in reference to the drink trade? They received into the breweries and distilleries the clean, wholesome grain, and the finished article was the poor, miserable drunkard. The drink trade was a trade that was bowed down to in many cases, because of the rights of property taking precedence of the rights of human personality. If the Church were to take action against the Food Controller for the awful waste of food which he permitted in the manufacture of strong drink, she would be doing her duty. They wanted the strongest denunciation from the Church in her corporal capacity against the evils of the liquor traffic. (Hear, hear.)

Professor Carpenter, in seconding the motion, appealed to the members of the Synod for support in the work of temperance in the parishes.

Mr. W. Roberts pointed out that the report stated the Committee were thankful to Almighty God for the advance that had been made in the temperance cause, and went on to ask what was the advance that had been made. Mr. Baillie had told them it had made no advance. Was it not time to change the title of the Church of Ireland Temperance Association to the Church of Ireland Total Abstinence Association? If they did that, then by this time twelve months they would not have such a disgraceful report as they now had. It was not worth the paper it was written on. (Hear, hear.)

Other speakers also advocated reforms in the work of the association, and it was suggested that the Committee should be changed.

The report was adopted, and Mr. T. Harrison and Mr. Henry O'Connor were added to the Committee.

FOREIGN MISSIONS.

On the motion of Sir Alfred Irwin, C.S.I., seconded by Canon Mervyn, the report of the Board of Missions was adopted.

CHEAP FOOD COMMITTEE.

Professor Carpenter moved the adoption of a report of the Cheap Food Dépôt Committee, which had been appointed at last Synod. During the year they had got into touch with an established organisation for the sale of cheap food to the poor, and in this way much good work had been done.

The Rev. T. C. Hammond, in seconding the resolution, said the Committee had been able to afford relief to more than one thousand of more penurious Church members by the distribution of tickets, which enabled them to purchase food at dépôts at little more than cost price.

The President thought the Committee had done excellent work. The Committee had been started by Mr. Henry O'Connor, a fact which should be on record.

The report was adopted and the Committee re-elected.

NON-COMMUNICATING ATTENDANCE.

The Rev. T. C. Hammond proposed a resolution, of which he had given notice, requesting the General Synod to make such provision as they might deem adequate to prevent the practice of non-communicating attendance in churches during the administration of the Lord's Supper.

Mr. J. H. Hunter seconded the motion, which, on a show of hands, was defeated by 60 votes to 56.

MEN'S SOCIETY.

On the motion of Mr. D. H. Calvert, seconded by Mr. W. C. Stubbs, a resolution was passed forming a diocesan branch of the Church of Ireland Men's Society, with headquarters in Dublin, and appointing a committee.

The Synod adjourned till a subsequent day, of which due notice will be published in this paper.

THE LEINSTER.

posed the vote of sympathy and asked them to pass it in the usual manner.

Mr. Beckett seconded the motion, and it was passed in silence, the members standing.

DERRY CORPORATION.

At the meeting of the Derry Corporation yesterday, a resolution of regret was passed at the death of Alderman McCarron; and the Mayor, referring to the fact that their deceased colleague had been brutally done to death by the Germans, hoped that no peace would be established that did not secure punishment adequate to the savage crimes committed by the Germans against humanity and civilisation.

DUNDALK'S CONDEMNATION.

In the Town Hall, Dundalk, yesterday afternoon, a public meeting was held to protest against the brutal murder of the Irish people by the torpedoing of the Leinster. Mr. James McCarthy, J.P., presided, in the absence of Mr. P. Judge, J.P., Chairman of the County Council.

The Chairman said that the murderous outrage of last week at the very sea-gate of our capital city; the callous sacrifice of helpless women and children by the savage instrument of so-called German kultur had appalled them all and outraged every human feeling of Irish hearts. There could be nothing but condemnation of this shockingly brutal act, which should be an object lesson to those of our misguided people who had any pro-German dispositions. He hoped that no peace would be signed until full retribution was exacted for the enormities perpetrated in France, Belgium, and elsewhere, and until the men who ordered the sinking of the Leinster were handed up to justice and summarily hanged. (Applause.)

Captain William A. Doran, J.P., Harristown, proposed a resolution viewing with horror and indignation the latest development of Prussian brutality in torpedoing the Leinster, and demanding that no peace should be made with Germany that did not exact reparation for this revolting and inhuman crime, and guarantees against its recurrence in the future. Captain Doran said he joined the 16th Division, and was now invalided out of the Army—broken by the two years he served in the trenches. If Irishmen stood aside at present they lost for ever what made a man—love of liberty and the desire to avenge injustice.

Mr. William Boyle, J.P., in seconding the resolution, said that the Irish were probably the most hated people in the world by the Germans—first, because the Germans expected material help from Ireland and had not got it; secondly, because there were three-quarters of a million of Irish soldiers in the American Army that was driving the Germans over the Rhine. (Applause.)

The resolution was passed with acclamation.

A SCENE AT KINGSTOWN.

At yesterday's meeting of Kingstown Urban District Council,

Mr. J. J. Kennedy, the Chairman, who presided, said that it was his duty to ask his colleagues to join with him in a vote of sympathy to those bereaved by the dastardly outrage committed on innocent people last Thursday. He feared that all the devils were not in hell—some of them were in this world in human shape—but God, in His good time, would render to man what his actions deserved. The methods employed by the German enemy were not only contrary to the law of God, but to the dictates of the human heart and of civilisation, as they understood it. Who was responsible? The man who was now looking for peace was the man who sent his minions into Dublin Bay and in the twinkling of an eye sent 600 people before their Maker. He did not wish to inflame people's minds or instigate them to vengeance. Their countrymen knew their duty and they were bound to do it, and, whilst in the past Ireland suffered, and even at present was not getting its rights, at the same time this outrage demanded retribution, and the Kaiser would surely get his deserts. He proposed the following resolution:—

That we, the members of the Kingstown Urban Council, meeting for the first time since the murderous outrage inflicted on hundreds of innocent people by the German enemy by the torpedoing of the mail packet steamer, the Leinster, desire to record our abhorrence at such brutal conduct, and on our own behalf and in the name of the residents of Kingstown and district, tender to the relatives and friends of those who lost their lives under such horrible circumstances, our heartfelt sympathy with them in their sorrow, and that copies of this resolution be forwarded to the Chief Secretary and to the directors of the Dublin Steam Packet Company.

Sir Thomas Robinson, in seconding the resolution, said that nothing could be gained by using words which, while expressing their horror, might be construed as intending to inflame the passions of their fellow-countrymen. The punishment of this horrible outrage was the province of another, and it would inevitably be awarded. He paid a tribute to Captain Birch and the other officers and men in the service of the Steampacket Company, and said they never flinched in discharging their duty.

Mr. O'Brien and Mr. H. Monks also spoke, associating themselves with the resolution.

Mr. M'Alister said that he, too, condemned the action of the brutal Germans.

Mr. Christopher Rochfort here made an observation.

Mr. M'Alister said that that observation did not show sympathy with the relatives of the victims.

Mr. Rochfort said he sympathised with the resolution of condolence with the relatives of the victims who had lost their livese in the terrible disaster. The speaker was continuing his observations when Mr. O'Brien said that Mr. Rochfort should not be further heard.

The Chairman asked Mr. O'Brien whether he rose to a point of order.

Mr. O'Brien said a discussion should not be allowed. It was an attempt to make little of the vote of sympathy.

The Chairman replied that that was not a point of order. As long as Mr. Rochfort did not infringe order he should hear him.

Mr. O'Brien said that Mr. Rochfort's observation was a disgraceful insinuation upon such a resolution. "It is horrible," added Mr. O'Brien, "that language like that should be allowed to continue, and if he repeats it I will break his face."

Mr. O'Brien, who was labouring under intense excitement, jumped from his seat, and, rushing across the Council Chamber, appeared to strike at Mr. Rochfort.

Mr. Rochfort made no attempt to retaliate, and remarked: "It is a nice way to hit a man on the back of the head."

Mr. O'Brien—I did not hit you on the back of the head.

Mr. Farrell, one of the Council attendants, then went between the Councillors, and the incident ended.

The resolution was passed.

THE PRESBYTERY OF DUBLIN.

A meeting of the Standing Commission of the Presbytery of Dublin was held yesterday, the Rev. J. L. Morrow presiding. It was reported that the Rev. J. R. Bartley, minister of Tralee, had gone down with the ss. Leinster; that the Rev. J. L. Rentoul, of Rostrevor, had been killed in France; and that the Rev. S. Semple, minister of Nenagh, had died. The following resolution was passed unanimously:—

That the Presbytery expresses its profound sympathy with all who have been bereaved by the criminal destruction of the ss. Leinster, and re-commends the members of the Presbyterian Church within its jurisdiction to generously support the fund for the relief of the sufferers.

CLARE ASYLUM GOVERNORS AND THE LEINSTER.

At a meeting of the Clare Asylum Managing Committee yesterday—the Rev. A. Clancy, P.P., presiding—Mr. John Lynch proposed a resolution condemning the sinking of the Leinster, and expressing deep sympathy with the relatives and friends of those who had lost their lives.

Mr. P. J. Linnane, J.P., in seconding the resolution, suggested that they should also condemn the action of the German Government, and referred in strong terms to the outrages committed by the German Government through their submarines, notably the sinking of the Lusitania. The sinking of the Leinster was cruel and heartless murder. It was outrages such as these on the high seas that had brought the American Army to the rescue of our peoples. Germany would now be crushed to pulp.

The Rev. Chairman agreed with the resolution offering sympathy to the friends and relatives.

TYRONE MAGISTRATES' SYMPATHY.

At the Clogher Quarter Sessions yesterday, before Judge Linehan, Mr. H. de F. Montgomery, D.L., proposed a resolution expressing deep sympathy with the relatives of the victims of the murderous attack on the mail boat Leinster on the 10th inst., especially with their colleague, Colonel Knox-Browne.

Mr. Geo. McElroy seconded, and His Honor said that the magistrates would endorse that resolution. Colonel Knox-Browne was a respected resident of that district.

The North Wall Branch of the National Union of Railwaymen and the Dublin Branch of the Steam Engine Workers' Society passed votes of condolence and sympathy with the relatives of those who have lost their lives through the sinking of the Leinster.

MR. DEVLIN AND "PRACTICAL CONDEMNATION."

At a Nationalist demonstration in Belfast on Saturday evening, Mr. Joseph Devlin, M.P., said—I think we should not pass away from this meeting without passing a resolution condemning in the strongest possible manner the murderous attack on our fellow-countrymen by the sinking of the Leinster. I am sure we all read of this tragedy with feelings of poignant sorrow for the victims and deep indignation against those who victimised them. I think I may say all our sympathies go out to the relatives of those innocent men and women who were sent to Eternity without a moment's notice, as part of the infamous propaganda which Germany is carrying on. I will venture to ask you to adopt the following resolution:—

That we, the assembled Nationalist electors of Falls Division, Belfast, hereby place on record our expression of the intense abhorrence and profound indignation which we feel regarding the piratical and murderous action of the German High Naval Command in wantonly sinking the Royal Mail steamer Leinster in the Irish Sea on October 10th, and consigning men, women, and children belonging to our own race and country. We feel that this holocaust of innocent life calls for condemnation by the whole civilised world, and in a special degree from the Irish people, whose kinsmen and kinswomen and children have been so wantonly sacrificed to the brutal lust for blood which has characterised Germany's conduct of the war from the very beginning of hostilities. We call on all right-thinking Irishmen to condemn and repudiate this terrible outrage and its cowardly authors, and we trust Irish National opinion will assert itself unmistakably in practical condemnation of a deed that has shocked and horrified the world.

The following telegram was despatched to the Lord Mayor of Dublin:—

In response to the appeal which you have made on behalf of the victims of the ss. Leinster outrage, I am requested by my constituents in Belfast to forward £100 as a subscription to your fund, and to convey heartfelt sympathy for the bereaved and best wishes for the success of the fund.

JOSEPH DEVLIN.

MEMORIAL SERVICE FOR LADY PHYLLIS HAMILTON.

The King and Queen were represented at St. Mark's, North Audley street, London, yesterday by Mr. Harry Verney, Queen Alexandra by Sir Earl Howe, and the Prince of Wales by Sir Sidney Greville at the Memorial Service for Lady Alexandra Phyllis Hamilton and her two servants, who were drowned in the torpedoing of the Leinster. Princess Christian and the Duke of Connaught attended in person, and there was a very large congregation, including the Dowager Duchess of Abercorn, Lady Phyllis's mother; Lord Claud Nigel Hamilton, her brother; Lord and Lady Lansdowne, Lady Blandford, Lord and Lady George Hamilton, Lord Claud Hamilton, Lord Frederick Hamilton, with many other relatives and a large number of friends.

The Service was conducted by the Vicar, the Rev. W. G. Pennyman, who gave an address, with Canon Edgar Sheppard and the Rev. H. R. L. Sheppard, of St. Martin-in-the-Fields. The anthem was Sullivan's "Though I walk through the valley of the shadow of death."

FUNERALS OF THE VICTIMS.

The funeral of Alderman James McCarron, one of the victims of the Leinster disaster, in Derry yesterday was the occasion of one of the most remarkable and impressive demonstrations ever witnessed in that city. The funeral cortége was over a mile long, and included the Mayor (Alderman Sir Robert N. Anderson), the members of the Corporation and other public bodies, shipyard workers, dockers, and female factory operatives, who marched in four deep, work having been suspended in the shipyard, at the quays, in the factories, and, indeed, in almost all trades in the city. One of the chief mourners was the soldier son of the deceased, who arrived from France just in time to meet the funeral on the way to the city cemetery.

Two of the victims, the Misses Nora and Delia Davoren, were buried in Ennis on Sunday. The funeral took place after a Requiem Mass at the Cathedral, the cortége to the family burial place at Drumcliffe being one of the largest seen in the district for years.

Reference to the outrage was made at the several Masses at the Cathedral in Ennis, where the remains of the two victims lay overnight. The Rev. F. H. Molony, addressing a very large congregation, said that the sinking of the Leinster was one of the most cruel things that had been done since the beginning of the war. The Very Rev. Father Hogan, Adm., spoke similarly at early Mass.

The body of Mr. William J. Pasker, one of the Post Office staff on the Leinster, has been recovered.

Fears are entertained for the safety of Miss Delia Brennick, Scardane, Claremorris, who left by the Leinster for Leeds. Up to the present the inquiries of her friends have elicited no information as to her whereabouts. Miss Brennick was a national teacher in Seefin School, but had given up her position for the nursing profession, and left Claremorris on Wednesday for a nursing home in Leeds. A telegram received from Leeds states that she has not arrived there, while a communication from Dublin conveys the intelligence that she left on the Leinster.

Mrs. Locke, widow of Captain Locke, was not a passenger on the Leinster.

There are also missing:—Miss Dorothy M. Jones, V.A.D., daughter of Mrs. Rowland Wade, of Charleville, Dalkey; Mrs. Pugin Thornton, William Warren, steward of the Leinster, of 6 Wellington street, Kingstown.

The many friends in Belfast of Mr. Charles Evans, No. 1 Osborne terrace, Balmoral (of Messrs. Guinness and Co., Ltd.), regret to learn that he, with his wife and young son, were on board the ill-fated Leinster. They were last seen standing on board after the vessel was torpedoed. They were about to take up residence in London, Mr. Evans having been transferred there in connection with the business of Messrs. Guinness.

Among the missing now are B. Ralph Murray, son of Mr. Albert Murray, Broughton House, Waterville; Anthony Jones, also of Waterville, and — Baker, Cork, all about seventeen years of age.

Rev. William I. Campbell, O.S.B., St. Mary's, Coventry (not Rev. Henry M. Campbell, O.S.B., his brother, as reported), is also missing. The missing clergyman had been staying with relatives at 27 Pembroke road, Dublin.

Miss Costello, Dunmore, who was reported as missing in Saturday's papers, is amongst those who were saved. She is a daughter of Dr. M. B. Costello, Dunmore, and was returning to Cambridge University after spending her holidays with her parents. She was for over an hour in the water after the Leinster was struck before she was picked up, and she probably owes her life to her skill as an expert swimmer. With Miss Costello on the Leinster was Miss Kirwan, of Dalgin, Tuam, sister of Mr. D. B. Kirwan, land agent, who was travelling to London, and is amongst those lost. Miss Sophie Barrett, of Carrickmines, was sister of Mr. J. Barrett, Dunmore, the well-known horse-trainer.

The Vossische Zeitung reports that the Soviet Government has decided to melt down all church bells and monuments for war purposes. Strong resistance to this proposal, the paper adds, is being experienced from all adherents of the Orthodox Church.

"PRACTICAL PROPOSALS."

TO THE EDITOR OF THE IRISH TIMES.

SIR,—On Thursday, October 10th, the Irish mail steamer Leinster was sunk, under aggravated circumstances, by German torpedoes, and many Irish women, children, and men were drowned. On Friday, October 11th, a "conference" was held at the Mansion House, Dublin, at which the following individuals were present—Messrs. Dillon, Devlin, Healy, Alderman T. Kelly, Professor MacNeill, M. J. Egan (Cork), and Thomas Johnston (Belfast). I am not a politician, but I understand that they are representatives of the so-called "patriotic parties" of Ireland. They sat in conference from 3 p.m. to 7 p.m., during which time their "further consideration was given to practical proposals for resistance to conscription." I quote the daily Press of October 12th.

I suppose, sir, that we others, who, thank God! cannot be accused of being Irish "patriots," must get accustomed to the fact that, through force of circumstances, we are living in a country which has disgraced itself for generations to come in the face of the whole civilised world. If Germany is to be included under that heading, at least she can say that her men know how to die. Perhaps, for the present it is sufficient to record the names of the conference who, the day after the occurrence, through enemy action, of one of the greatest Irish tragedies, met to consider these "practical proposals." We owe it to posterity to keep the record.—Yours, etc.,

"X."

A THREATENED RUIN

TO THE EDITOR OF THE IRISH TIMES.

SIR,—Owing to pressure brought to bear on him by the Department of Agriculture regarding tillage, Colonel Raleigh Chichester-Constable, of Burton-Constable, Hull, who has, during his ownership of the lands of Glenballythomas, Tulsk, Co. Roscommon, done his part to preserve the ruins of the great pre-historic City of Oona-na-Cruckna, the pride of Connaught, in the state in which they have existed for 2,000 years, is now forced to dispose of these lands. Doubtless, the small proprietors who will invest in the ten holdings into which the 835 acres are split will use the stones of which Relignarce (the burial place of the kings of the Irish provinces) is composed to build their houses. Cahirnababilody and Cashelmannin will be levelled to the ground. Dathi's pillar will be broken up to pave a street or make the lintel of a door or a gate-post. All these memorable memorials of the Heroic Age will be obliterated for ever. Noted savants and professors, like Ridgeway, Macalister, and Quiggin will no longer come from foreign Universities to pore over these famous landmarks.

Why cannot the Government be prevailed on to buy this Baalbec of the West and keep it intact for the Irish nation, as the Frenches, Balfes, and Chichester-Constables have done for 600 years? Or cannot the Department relax their rigour in this hallowed area? In less than one hundred years, if old prophecy is true, we will have in Ireland an era like that in the reign of Brian Boru. Why not try and preserve these megalithic remains for the glory of Ireland?—Yours, etc.,

"ANTIQUARY."

Co. Roscommon, October 12th, 1918.

REMEMBER THE LEINSTER.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE IRISH TIMES.

SIR,—So many people think and speak in terms of Ulster—and the rest of Ireland. The recent sinking of a vessel to which her name was given, and the fact that the atrocity was committed off her shores, have served as a reminder that there is a Province of Leinster. It is possible that by thought, action, and organisation Leinster, as a province, will seize the privilege, of replying to the German challenge.

This reply could suitably be one of men and of money; its effectiveness would be ensured by a combined recruiting and war savings campaign designed to this end. Thus the recruitable and non-recruitable sections of the people would be able to assist. It is surprising that, during the past years of fighting, no spectacular campaign, calculated to instruct and impress the minds of the people of Ireland, has been carried out, particularly as, owing to our remoteness from the havoc of war, special stimulation is necessary. Across the Irish Sea, where the population is conscripted, where bombardments from sea and sky have left their horrid impress on person and property, and where war conditions of a most harassing nature have had to be stoically endured, frequent campaigns have been conducted to feed the fire of enthusiasm, to keep faith in the ultimate issue unimpaired, and to obtain war contributions. At the moment, for instance, the scenic artist has transformed that classic centre, Trafalgar square, into a representation of a section of the devastated war zone. Huge howitzers and caterpillar tractors are rumbling on exhibition through the London streets. It was even proposed to shake the city to its foundations with a simultaneous blast of anti-aircraft guns, all with the view of urging the citizens to purchase a war savings certificate.

Is it impossible to ascertain the effect of a similar, if less extravagant, project in Ireland? With the consent of the Recruiting Council and the co-operation of the War Savings Committee, the banks, and the local authorities—a consent which should readily be accorded—a short energetic campaign could be carried on through the Province of Leinster, with the stated object of raising sufficient men and money to provide a specified naval or military unit, or both, as a definite reply to Germany's challenge to Ireland. The programme might consist of a one-day visit to each of the larger centres in the province, of a travelling party comprising, say, a band, lecturers, a captured gun and other war trophies, some Leinster relics, a cinema, a photographic exhibition, and a travelling post-office. The morning could be devoted to war savings purposes, the evening to a recruiting appeal. The lectures and distributed literature should deal with what Ireland has done in the war (diatribes are apt to become wearisome), war aims, descriptions of battles won and lost—all with intent to encourage and exhort rather than to admonish. The lecturers should consist of a few good speakers—Irish men and women—who have had actual experience of the fighting line, or have survived atrocities similar to that which has just shocked the nation. It would be a mission dedicated to a solemn purpose—the avenging of our women and children.

To those who pin faith to a programme of platitudes, posters, and paste, and who regard a departure from time-honoured custom as a useless expenditure of time, trouble, and money, this suggestion will make but little appeal. There are others, prominent Dublin men, with whom the writer has discussed the scheme, who consider it possesses many elements of success. The moment is opportune for giving trial to such a campaign, and thus to enable Leinster to offer a definite reply of her own to the Leinster outrage and, at the same time, "to keep the clock hands moving," and to increase the province's holding in war securities. The other provinces would doubtless, endeavour to outstrip Leinster's lead. If the date for conscription could be postponed for twelve months, the prospects of the campaign would in no wise suffer.—Yours, etc.,

"OCULUS."

Dublin, October 13th, 1918.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE IRISH TIMES.

SIR,—The Irish Recruiting Council have recently issued a series of advertisements under the title of "The Fighting Irish," recording the deeds of the well-known Irish regiments during the war. Seven of these have already appeared—the Dublins, Munsters, Connaughts and Royal Irish Regiment of the Southern Divisions, and the Inniskillings, Royal Irish Fusiliers, and Rifles of the Ulster Division. Considerable comment has been caused by the omission of another Irish regiment—the Leinsters. This may have been an oversight, but it should be rectified; now is the time to do it. If there is any glimmer of imagination among those in charge of Irish recruiting, they would recognise that now is the time to obtain recruits for the Leinster Regiment. The name has now a new and special significance for the Irish people. What could be more fitting than that the murderers of the Irish men, women, and children who went down on the Leinster should have justice meted out to them by Irish soldiers bearing this name on their caps and tunics? Let the Leinsters avenge the Leinster. This is a debt of honour which they can and must repay.—Yours, etc.,

PEMBROKE URBAN COUNCIL.

ELECTRIC ENERGY FROM THE LIFFEY.

A meeting of the Pembroke Urban Council was held last evening in the Town Hall, Ballsbridge, Mr. C. P. O'Neill (Chairman) presiding. Other members present:—Messrs. William Beckett, D. W. Carpmills, James Cassidy, Timothy Crowe, J. Delany, W. M. Forsyth, J.P.; John Good, J.P.; Michael Fannin, George Goodfellow, John Mooney (Jun.), M. G. Orr, Thomas Ryan.

The Clerk (Mr. J. C. Manly) read a letter from Mr. C. P. Coote Cummins, Principal and Secretary of the Pembroke Technical Instruction Committee, stating that he had decided to resign his position as Secretary after twenty-two years' service, as he found himself no longer able to carry out the very arduous duties.

The Chairman said that he regretted very much that Mr. Coote Cummins had sent in his resignation. He was a most excellent official, and he (the Chairman) wished he would reconsider his decision.

After some discussion a committee was appointed, on the motion of Mr. Forsyth, to go into the circumstances which led to Mr. Coote Cummins tendering his resignation, and to see if a settlement of the matters in dispute could be arrived at.

The Chairman moved:—"That this Council has learned with pleasure of the scheme of the Dublin and Lucan Electric Railway Company, whereby it is proposed to generate electric energy from the River Liffey, and thereby to save at least 16,000 tons of coal each year—the Council is satisfied this scheme deserves support, and would urge the Government to do whatever is necessary to carry through this work of urgent national importance. That a copy of the resolution be sent to the Chief Secretary and to the company."

Mr. Ryan seconded the motion, which was adopted.

WAR BONUSES.

An application was received from the Pembroke Municipal Officers' Association asking for the Civil Service scale of war bonus.

The Clerk said that the Finance Committee of the Council agreed that the war bonus in the full terms of Civil Service scale be granted to all officers of the Council and members of the staff, except Mr. Middleton, Mr. Price, and Mr. Wickham, and that all war bonuses and allowances in lieu of same heretofore granted be cancelled, and also excepting for the present the electric lighting officials pending the decision of the arbitrator under the award of the Committee on Production.

Mr. Forsyth said that the carrying out of the recommendations meant an expenditure of about £1,100. If it were dated from 1st July, he thought it would meet the case. The increase given to their labourers meant 10d. in the £, and, if they took in the electric lighting staff, the present proposal would involve £1,500, or 3d. in the £. It was a very serious matter.

Mr. Good—There is no provision made for such an expenditure.

The Chairman said that they had to remember that they were in the midst of the war.

Mr. Orr—We have gone as far as we could, and now we will have to apply ourselves in the other direction.

The Council decided to adopt the Finance Committee's recommendation, the war bonuses to date from the 1st July.

LONDON MONEY MARKET.

Bank Rate (changed April 5th, 1917) ...... 5 p.c.

There was a rather keen demand for call money in the Loan Market, and the War Bond campaign is evidently reducing the margin on which the market is working. Call loans did not range below 3 to 3½ p.c., and the market borrowed a small sum from the Bank of England for a week at 5 p.c. Weekly loans were firm at 3½ p.c. Nearly half a million was disbursed in dividends, etc., chiefly upon Grand Trunk Railway Debs. There was no important change in the Discount Market. The supply of paper was moderate, and short-dated bills were rather harder in sympathy with loans. Quotations, however, did not vary. Short-dated Treasury bills were quoted at 3½ to 3½ p.c.

The following foreign exchange rates were current:—New York cables 4.76⅛ to 4.76⅛; Paris, 26.08 to 26.10; Amsterdam, 11.06 to 11.16; Madrid, 23.12 to 23.20; Italy, 30.25 to 30.37½; Christiania, 17.10 to 17.17; Stockholm, 16.11 to 16.18; Berne, 23.40 to 23.90; Rio, 90 day bills, 12⅛d.

LONDON STOCKS CHEERFUL

The Stock Exchange was cheerful, without vigour, conditions resembling those current last week. The accumulation of business over the week-end was strictly moderate, and prices continued to lack a good lead, though there was general evidence of firmness, and specialities showed strength in places. Gilt-edged issues, as a whole, showed to advantage. Consols rebounded sharply at one time, but only held a net gain of ¼ at 60⅞. Among miscellaneous gilt-edged issues a firm tone predominated, and there was sufficient investment support to keep this section tending forward, despite the substantial flow of capital into War Bonds. Irish Land Loans and Indian and Colonial Loans were favoured.

Changes.—Rises—Consols, ¼ to 60⅞; 5 p.c. War Loan, ⅛ to 96; 3 p.c. Land Act Stock, ⅛ to 65. Fall—4½ p.c. War Loan, ⅛ to 100⅛.

ALLIED BONDS STEADY.—In the Foreign market Allied Bonds showed spottily to advantage. French Fives advanced ½ to 85½. Far Eastern issues also tended forward. Russian Bonds were inclined to move in sympathy, but the Fives, after being up to 64, closed without net change at 63. Spanish Fours reflected the less favourable exchange position for Madrid, and the quotation fell 2 to 95½. Among South Americans, Peruvians were still off colour, though there was not much selling to report. Brazilians were steady, and the Rio exchange was about the same. Mexican Bonds met a renewed inquiry.

Changes.—Rises—Brazil Fours, 1 to 62; do. Funding (1908), 2 to 80; Chinese 4½ p.c., 1 to 83; French Loan, ½ to 85½. Fall—Spanish Fours, 2 to 95½.

RAILS BETTER.—Home Rails were a firm but spotty market. Support was insufficient to carry the list generally forward, but several specialities advanced narrowly. North-Westerns and Great Westerns did not retain slight gains. Passenger Stocks were quiet and colourless. There was hardly any movement in the Scotch group.

Canadian Pacifics were firm. Mexican Railway issues hung fire. The 2nd Pref., at 42, lost ½, but the close was firm. Many Argentine Rails scored further advances of around a point, while in the Brazilian group San Paulos rose 1 to 196½, and Leopoldinas, at 42, were ½ up.

Changes.—Rises—Chatham, ¼ to 11⅞; Great Central Def., ⅛ to 10½; Great Northern Def., ⅛ to 40½; Lancs and Yorks, ⅛ to 67⅛; North-Eastern Consols, ⅛ to 100½; Underground Inc. Bonds, ⅛ to 87; Grand Trunk 3rd Pref., ⅛ to 26; Buenos Ayres Great Southern, ⅛ to 73½; Buenos Ayres and Pacific, 1 to 53; Buenos Ayres and Western, 1 to 74; Central Argentine Ord., ⅛ to 64½; Entre Rios, 1 to 32; San Paulo, 1 to 196½. Falls—Central Uruguay, ⅛ to 69½; Mexican Rails 2nd Pref., ½ to 42.

INDUSTRIALS BRIGHTER.—In the Miscellaneous and Industrial market conditions were irregularly cheerful, apart from Armaments, which again encountered some selling pressure, and marked another fairly general set-back. Kynochs were weak at 1⅞ on the report. The Marconi group was slow, but the only quotable change was a slight set-back in Spanish Wireless to 15/-. Shipping descriptions were spottily better, and were evidently anxious to dissociate themselves from the reaction in Armaments. P. and O. Def. was put up 5 to 440, and Cunards rose ⅛ to 5½. Court Lines, however, were weaker. Canada Common and Furness Withys met good support. Cement issues were in renewed favour. Among Breweries, Allsopp Pref. rose 1 to 63½, and the rest of the group was good on the latest results. Mexico Tram Bonds were hoisted 5. Pyrotan Leathers were hardly so good around 3½, but were rallying at the close. Land Shares were quiet.

Changes.—Rises—Assd. Cement, ⅛ to 6½; British Portland Cement, ⅛ to 1⅛; Cunard, ⅛ to 5½; Parent Tyre Def., ⅛ to 3; P. and O. Def., 5 to 440; Allsopp Pref., 1 to 63½; Brazilian Tractions, 1 to 58; Mexican Light and Power Bonds, 1 to 67; Mexican Tram Bonds, 5 to 60. Falls—B.S.A., ¼ to 3⅛; Brit. Oil and Cake, ⅛ to 2; Brunner Mond, ⅛ to 2⅛; Court Line, 1/6 to 36/-; Dunlops, ⅛ to 4⅛; Kynoch, ⅛ to 1⅛; Lipton Pref., 3d. to 15/9; Nat. Explosives, 1 to 29/6; Nobel, ⅛ to 3⅛.

OIL SHARES QUIET.—Oils wore a steady to dull appearance, and quotations did not vary much. Shells barely held at 5⅛. There was a slight improvement in Kern Rivers. Chelekens picked up to 12/6. The Egyptian group was steady.

Changes.—Anglo-Egypt B, 53/3+1/-; Burmah, 6⅛+⅛; Kern River, 15/-+10½d.; Lobitos, 47/6+1/3; Mexican Eagle, 77/9+1/4½; do. Pref., 79/9+6d.; N. Caucasian, 26/6+1½d.; Rum. Consol., 16/6+3d.; Shell, 113/9-6d.; Spies, 12/7½-4½d.; Ural Caspian, 33/-+1/1½.

MINING MARKET CHEERFUL.—There was a moderate business among Mines, and the market was inclined to cheerfulness. Kaffirs benefited from the appointment of the committee to inquire into the increased cost of gold production, and in the result shares of low grade mines tended forward with other specialities. East Rand Props closed under best. Vaal Rivers showed renewed cheerfulness among Diamonds, Cape buying being again attributed to the increased influx of diggers and the high prices realised for the stones. Rhodesians were spotty, and Russian, under the lead of Russo-Asiatic, were strong. Tin Shares were dull. The metal fell 30/- per ton. The Transvaal output of gold for September was 708,206 ozs., against 740,210 ozs. for August. The native labour figures were about the same.

RUBBER SHARE MARKET ACTIVE.—The London price of rubber was 2/4 per lb. The Share Market opened with a strong and confident tone, and the volume of business was greatly increased. Anglo-Dutch rose to 33/7½ c.d., Linggi to 28/3, London-Asiatic to 9/1½, and Rubber Trust to 28/3. Brieh have been taken up to 35/-, Golden Hope marked 65/-, and Johore Lands improved to 32/6, while Malayalam showed activity, finishing 37/9 bid. Sialang rose 5/-, and there were many transactions in Sungei Buaya around 57/6. A large business was done in Floriners. Pelepah Valleys rose to 3/10½ bid. Other dealings in this group includes Bekoh around 4/9, Rotterdam Deli between 5/- and 5/3, and United Temiang up to 4/8. In the Borneo group Kimanis were higher at 22/6, and Langkon came into demand, finishing 21/3 bid. Lok Kawi showed business up to 24/7½.

GREAT INCREASE IN IMPORTS.

The statistics dealing with our foreign trade for September show that imports during that month increased by nearly 11½ millions to nearly 98 millions, while exports at nearly 40½ millions were 3 millions down. On the import side grain and flour imports were worth 2½ millions less, but meat imports increased in value by over 5½ millions, and other food imports by over 5 millions. NATIONAL MATERNITY HOSPITAL HOLLES STREET.

The 24th annual report of that excellent Dublin institution, the National Maternity Hospital, Holles street, shows that it is in urgent need of monetary support. A few figures will suffice to indicate the urgency of the hospital's need. The cost of maintenance in 1917-18 was £3,779, compared with £2,365 in 1912-13—an increase of £1,414. The subscriptions and donations last year showed the serious decrease of £696 compared with 1916-17, the total deficit for 1917-18 being £322. During the year 977 patients were admitted to the hospital; there were 544 births, 301 operations were performed, 829 women were attended at their homes, 647 births were recorded at the homes, 10,000 visits were paid by the nurses, and 2,537 cases were attended in the out-patient dispensary. At present every bed in the hospital is occupied, and the committee are confidently appealing to the generous public to save the mothers and children of Dublin.

BRITISH MANUFACTURERS' CORPORATION.

NEW MUTUAL SCHEME FOR DEVELOPMENT OF EXPORT TRADE.

MANDLEBERG PROPOSALS ADOPTED.

As the result of a largely attended meeting of manufacturers and producers from all parts of the United Kingdom, held in Manchester recently, a new association has been formed under the name of the British Manufacturers' Corporation to carry into effect the proposals of Sir Charles Mandleberg for concerted action by manufacturers with a view to largely increasing the British export trade after the war.

A SCHEME ON NATIONAL LINES.

Sir Charles Mandleberg, who presided at the meeting, in explaining the scheme, laid stress on the main object—namely, to obtain practical results in the shape of more orders from overseas. Getting information about trade openings and opportunities abroad was useful only when it led to getting the trade itself, and it was solely with the latter consideration in view that the Corporation was being formed. He showed that the national as well as manufacturers' own interests demanded prompt and vigorous action in this direction, inasmuch as a large increase in the export trade meant more revenue wherewith to meet the enormously increased taxation and more employment at a time when the needs of the returning troops, as well as those at present employed in industry, would constitute grave labour problems.

The new organisation would be on national lines, open to all British manufacturers and producers desirous of finding new markets abroad or of more energetically cultivating existing markets. It would have no capital and would not be dividend-earning. All the benefits derived would be in the shape of increased trade.

THE MAN ON THE SPOT.

The scheme was based, Sir Charles proceeded, on the lessons of experience. What had been lacking in the past was the presence in each foreign market of some reliable person able to guide manufacturers, to keep them in touch with local requirements, to protect their interests, and to act for them in emergencies. The man on the spot was the key to the situation. Where a firm was powerful enough to have its own house or branch in a foreign country with proper representation the results were invariably good. The chicanery which so often discouraged manufacturers was effectually checked by the man on the spot, so that even passively such a man was a trade factor of great importance. Individual firms could not have such representation where the turnover did not warrant the expense, but they could get over the difficulty by combining to cover the cost.

A corporation of manufacturers and producers, with 1,000 members, each subscribing £100 or £200 a year, as might be determined, would have an annual income of £100,000 or £200,000, and with such an amount at its disposal it would be in a position to secure the highest class of representatives.

THE AGENT-IN-CHARGE.

These overhead representatives overseas—whom he suggested could be called Agents-in-Charge—should be established in the various markets to act in the interests of all members of the Corporation. They would not be selling agents, their functions being more those of a principal on the spot:—

1. The Agent-in-Charge in each country must necessarily be British, and possessed of commercial experience and knowledge of the language and trading customs acquired by previous residence. Of high commercial standing, his position and prestige would give him influence in checking chicanery, securing the best selling agents for exclusively British goods, commanding the best legal services for members of the Corporation, and obtaining advance news of likely trade openings.

TECHNICAL EXPERTS.

2. The Agent-in-Charge would be assisted by an adequate staff, including a capable deputy, together with technical experts retained to advise him on the country's requirements and report on foreign competitors' activities; the information thus gained would be communicated to members to enable them to produce counter-samples and thus compete more successfully. Each headquarters office abroad would become an information bureau in all local commercial matters—transport, railway rates, Customs regulations—for the guidance of members. A local advisory board of sympathetic bankers, traders, etc., would be formed to advise the Agent-in-Charge at need as to trade tendencies, and especially as to the status and reputation of buyers.

SELLING AGENTS.

3. The Agent-in-Charge would recommend and appoint selling agents for members when desired, either for single firms, groups, or combinations, so arranging that competing firms would not be represented by the same agent. After appointment, selling agents and manufacturers would conduct their business direct, the Agent-in-Charge only intervening in emergencies, power of attorney being given to him to act in disputes.

HOME CENTRES.

In this country a central office under a managing director would be the administrative link between members and the Agent-in-Charge. Offices would also be opened in the chief manufacturing centres here, the manager in each being chosen mainly for his thorough knowledge of the details of the export trade. Members unfamiliar with shipping routine would have the benefit of his guidance in such matters as preparing consular invoices, best methods of transport, freight rates, and insurance.

FINANCIAL ARRANGEMENTS.

It was pointed out that financial facilities were now available, through banks and other sources, whereby members could be assured of prompt cash advances, and of having their foreign accounts substantially guaranteed against loss, and that the Corporation, in its collective capacity, could secure advantageous terms for members desiring to avail themselves of such services.

GETTING IN TOUCH.

Such were the outlines of the scheme—Agents-in-Charge to protect members' interests abroad, technical experts who would give advice, information bureaux at home and abroad to equip manufacturers and producers with all the necessary knowledge, and financial facilities and safeguards against risks designed to give them the confidence essential to enterprise. The great advantage for every manufacturer would be that it would put him into a position for getting into direct touch with his foreign customers. He would get to know their precise needs on the one hand, and, on the other, he would be able to put before them his entire range of products. He could get his own trade marks known and established, and look forward, as was not always the case under present conditions, to obtaining the repeat order where his goods had been found acceptable.

REPORT AVAILABLE TO MANUFACTURERS.

During the discussion it was resolved that the Chairman's address and a report of the proceedings be printed, and that copies be forwarded to manufacturers and producers on application to the Hon. Secretary.

CORPORATION TO BE FORMED.

It was reported that, roughly, three hundred firms had already agreed to be associated with the proposals. Complete unanimity was shown as to the desirability of putting the scheme into operation, and it was resolved to form the British Manufacturers' Corporation forthwith. A Provisional Committee was elected to take the necessary measures, and it was left to the Executive Committee, when formed, to fix the subscription to the Corporation at a rate not exceeding £200 per annum. Honorary officers were appointed as follows:—

Regret for Illegal Assembly.—At the Strabane Quarter Sessions Patrick McGrade, Patrick McBrearty, Columb McGill, shop assistants, and Cornelius Boyle, postman, appealed against the decision of a special court held at Donemana, sentencing them to a month's imprisonment for alleged unlawful assembly on the night of the 17th August. The accused expressed regret, and His Honour Judge Linehan, K.C., reversed the order of the magistrates on that account, but allowed the order regarding bail to stand.

Knitting Wool.—Up to 12/6 per lb. is being charged for knitting wool in the Midlands, and public boards are unable to obtain contracts.

Larceny of Bicycles.—A large number of bicycles have recently been stolen in Portadown. At the Petty Sessions yesterday the Resident Magistrate (Mr. A. Bell) said that if any case of the kind were brought up in future the magistrates would send the offenders to jail, because it was high time that the larceny of bicycles in Portadown should be put a stop to.

CHANTICLEER'S NOTES.

(SPECIAL TELEGRAM.)

NEWMARKET, MONDAY NIGHT.

I understand that A. Smith will have the mount on He in the Cesarewitch on Wednesday, vice Donoghue, concerning whose prospective ride in that race there are various reports current this evening. He certainly does not ride Air Raid, to which some people have assigned him. It is possible he may ride St. Tudwal, or even Greek Scholar, each of whom holds a great winning chance. I hear also good accounts of Golden Rule.

Diadem is greatly fancied by her connections to win the Champion Stakes to-morrow, and in the doubt as to which may prove the better of the Manton pair I shall risk the issue with Diadem. My fancies for to-morrow are:—

Trial Plate—New Guinea; if absent, Blue Danube. Abington Plate—Stand Too. Clearwell Stakes—Buchan or Manilardo. Suffolk Nursery—Polygnotus or Palestrina. Newmarket Oaks—Queen's Square. Kirtling Plate—Best Born.

PUBLIC AMUSEMENTS.

GAIETY THEATRE.

"The Story of the Rosary" is one of the Walter Howard plays, which estimate so well the basic human emotions, and interpret them with such popular success. It has the right proportions of love and war, and tells so graphically of the pilgrimage of a noble-minded man of Mars and his beautiful lover through trial to triumph as to make a generally favourable impression. The rosary and its story are introduced as a link between the two during their separation, and its symbolism is skilfully utilised as a stimulus of an emotion which is healthy and refreshing. The same may be said of the broad lines of the story, which tells of virtue temporarily trodden under foot, but eventually triumphant over what is malevolent and mean, and if a constant indulgence in emotionalism is not to be recommended an occasional arpeggio on the deeper chords of feeling is not, on the other hand, to be deprecated. Love, battle, and plot are strongly supplemented in the play with a strain of humour.

THEATRE ROYAL HIPPODROME.

Patrons of the Theatre Royal Hippodrome have an opportunity this week of seeing and hearing Miss Ethel Warwick in a one-act play, entitled "A Woman Intervenes," by Huntley Manners (the author of "Peg o' My Heart"). If the play had been specially written for Miss Warwick it could not have suited her better. Her art is the art that conceals art, as it is difficult to realise that her performance is acting and not reality. The subject of the little play is one that appeals to all parts of the house, and has just that touch of melodrama that makes it fit naturally into a variety programme. She is well supported by Mr. Cyril Dane, Mr. Alfred Terris, and Mr. Henry May. Suther, the one man musical revue, is a marvel in quick changes. He appears in rapid succession in the characteristic costumes of the people of Ireland, Scotland, and all the principal countries of the world, and in each instance plays national airs on native musical instruments. Although Suther is in Dublin it may not be out of place to remind him that there is also a country called England. Artemas, the comedy illusionist, is on a return visit, and again amuses and confuses his audience with his clever feats. The Helen Moore Trio (consisting of Miss Helen Moore, soprano; Miss Terry O'Connor, violinist, and Miss Dina Copeman, pianist) are favouring the public with another week's performances. It needs no words in a newspaper to commend this trio to favourable consideration. They stand upon their merits, and everyone will agree that their contribution to the programme is a musical treat of a high order. The Four Clovelly Girls return with their clever club manipulation. Cissie Hughes gives a smart little juvenile turn, and Norman Carroll is heard in song, story, and monologue. The bioscope pictures illustrate the sad spectacle witnessed at Kingstown Pier last Thursday when the dead bodies of the unfortunate people drowned from the ss. Leinster were brought ashore. There are also some pictures of the wounded in hospital.

QUEEN'S THEATRE.

Two full houses last evening accorded a good reception to the performance by Mr. J. Augustus Keogh's company of the popular detective drama, "The Ticket-of-Leave Man." The company is an all-Dublin company, and Mr. Keogh himself takes a prominent part in the cast—the part of Melter Moss. The six scenes into which the piece is divided are admirably worked out. The play was presented in excellent style, and the audience exhibited very keen interest in the development of the plot. Mr. Breffni O'Rorke gave a competent and sober representation of the character of Robert Brierly, and Mr. Eric Grey acted the Detective Hawkshaw almost to perfection. The other parts were filled by Ira Allen (James Dalton), D. M'Carthy (Mr. Gibson), G. Larchett (Green Jones), A. Byrne (Maltby), J. F. Halles (Brenton), May Murnane (May Edwards), Nancy Doe (Emily St. Evremonde), Moya Nugent (Sam Willoughby), and Moira Breffni (Mrs. Willoughby).

THE EMPIRE THEATRE.

The McNally Opera Company produced "Lurline" last night at the Empire Theatre before a crowded house, and the audience received it with repeated applause, which the performance well deserved. Miss Mildred Telford, has, in the title role a part which suits her admirably, and she sang all her music with full appreciation and effect. Mr. Walter McNally repeated his success as Rhineberg, and was in splendid voice. As Ghiva, Miss Joan Burke sang her music with tunefulness and finish, and Mr. W. J. Lemass and Mr. Harry O'Dempsey as Baron Tondfels and Count Rudolph respectively were both fully equal to the requirements of the parts. The dresses and accessories were picturesque and appropriate, and the way in which the opera is presented does credit to the McNally Opera Company.

TIVOLI THEATRE.

The Tivoli was in its usual crowded state at both houses last night, and several old favourites were welcomed on return visits. Prominent amongst these were Power and Bendon, whose sketch, "Mendin' the Door," seems to be as popular as ever. W. H. Prowse also returns and gives his remarkable performance with coins, balls, bicycles, etc., moving them about at will without the assistance of his hands. Arthur Greene, a local turn, appeared as an Irish comedian and dancer, and fully proved his right to a place on the programme. The Emillion Brothers and lady partner, as equilibrists, introduced a number of novel feats, and Charles Ancaster was both clever and amusing as a comedy juggler. The Murtagh Trio of Irish vocalists and dancers had a good reception, and delighted the audience with their performance, while George Selby, eccentric comedian; Percy Korah and Linda Arthur, vocalists and dancers, and the bioscope, completed an excellent bill.

Princess Cinema, Rathmines.—A great attraction is showing at the Princess Cinema, Rathmines, for the opening half of the week in the form of an exclusive production of the official war pictures, "Our Boys in France." Residents in Rathmines and all who have missed an opportunity of seeing the work of the Irish regiments from the base to going over the top, as well as a fine show of tanks, should not miss an opportunity of visiting the Princess Cinema, which is one of the finest houses of its class in Dublin. The programme also includes a feature film, "For All Eternity," the latest Pathé Gazette, a Keystone comedy, and a fresh instalment of the serial, "Cab No. 13." There is appropriate music by the orchestra, under the direction of Professor Renaud.

Carlton Cinema.—"Sevens Keys to Baldpate," an excellent Artcraft production, with George M. Cohan in the leading part, is the chief film showing for the first time in Dublin at the Carlton Cinema, 52 Upper Sackville street. The programme also includes some striking scenes at Kingstown, the hospitals, the mortuary, etc., in connection with the torpedoing of the R.M.S. Leinster, also comedy and popular interest subjects. There is very fine orchestral music, with a violin solo, "Reverie" (Vieuxtemps), by Mr. Goldwater at 4.30 and 8.30 p.m. daily. On Thursday a new programme will be presented, the chief film being Douglas Fairbanks in "The Man from Painted Post."

Bohemian Picture Theatre.—"The Flame of the Yukon," described as the best picture screened this year, is being exhibited exclusively at the Bohemian Picture Theatre, Phibsborough. It is a vigorous and appealing drama of Alaska during the lawless gold rush period, with Dorothy Dalton as Queen of the Dance Hall. "The Flame" starts daily at 4, 6.15, and 9 p.m. The programme also includes scenes from the mail boat disaster, and a full series of comedy and interest subjects, with appropriate orchestral music.

Grafton Picture House.—"The Argyle Case," a photo. play in seven thrilling acts, with Robert Warwick in the leading part, is attracting large numbers to the Grafton Picture House, Grafton street. Scenes from the Leinster disaster, a two-part Keystone comedy, and other features are included in the programme, with excellent orchestral music.

Pillar Picture House.—"Maternity," a five-part film drama of the war, with Alice Brady as the heroine, is the chief pictorial attraction showing at the Pillar Picture House, Sackville street. There are also some very amusing comedies and topical subjects, with the latest Gazette, and music by a string orchestra.

The Rotunda.—"Pots and Pans Peggy," an Irish-American five-part drama, showing for the first time in Dublin, is the leading feature at the Rotunda Pictures. Other films include Charlie Chaplin in his famous two-reel comedy, "The Vagabond"; scenes in connection with the Leinster disaster; the 16th episode of "The Fatal Ring" serial, and a new Pathé Gazette. A variety turn is provided by Mr. J. Lawton, ventriloquist and entertainer. On Thursday there will be a fresh programme, when a film version of "Sapho" will be presented.

Rathmines Town Hall.—A series of striking films of the disaster to the Leinster is being exhibited at the Town Hall, Rathmines. The programme also includes the final episode of Ambassador Gerard's experiences in Germany. Dorothy Fairbanks in a five-part Artcraft drama, "Down to Earth," with comedy and topical subjects.

The Pavilion, Kingstown.—A humorous series, entitled "Wild Wooly," is one of the amusing features at the Pavilion Picture House, Kingstown. "The Victim's Daughter," as the title implies, is very dramatic, and forms a strong contrast. It is relieved by some very interesting scenes in one of the Drew comedies. The Pavilion orchestra, under the direction of Mme. Lucy Donnelly, provides some very attractive selections.

DUBLIN CHAMBER OF COMMERCE.

The monthly meeting of the Dublin Chamber of Commerce was held in their Council Room, Commercial Buildings, Dame street, yesterday, when Mr. Edward H. Andrews, D.L., President, presided.

Votes of condolence were passed with the relatives of the following gallant gentlemen who lost their lives in the service of their country:—Lieutenant Edmund Mahony, Captain Lee, M.D., R.A.M.C., and Captain Cooper, R.A.F.

A vote of condolence was passed with Mr. James Shanks, J.P., on the death of his wife. Votes of condolence were also passed with the relatives of the late Mr. Arthur Murphy and Mr. W. H. Richardson.

The Council again had the important matter of Galway as a Transatlantic port under consideration, and they confirmed the resolution passed at a general meeting of the Chamber held in 1911, which, having regard to the advantages afforded by Galway, maintained that that route was the best.

The Council had the restrictions in electric lighting again under consideration, and, amongst other steps, it was decided to appoint a deputation to wait upon the Electric Lighting Committee of the Corporation.

It was decided to adjourn the meeting for a few days, when the subject will again come up for further consideration, and the taking of such action as may be deemed advisable.

The Council noted with satisfaction that the Company Law Amendment Committee had adopted the suggestions made by the Council, and that the suggestions had been duly embodied in the Committee's report.
